'All-out war' erupts in torn Middle East

By United Press International

The fourth all-out war in a quarter of a century broke out in the Middle East Saturday. Within hours Israel reported victories in the air, on the sea and in the occupied Golan Heights over Egyptian and Syrian forces.

Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Dayan called the fighting along Israel's northern front with Syria and the Suez Canal front with Egypt "all-out war" and predicted Israeli victory within a matter of days.

An Israeli pool correspondent on the Golan Heights front said that by midnight Saturday the battle with Syria had died into an occasional shot, and that Israeli troops had regained all lost ground.

The national radio correspondent said Syrian troops had managed to break through the front-line security fence, but suffered heavy casualties.

Later Saturday the battles spread to the sea front and an Israeli military spokesman said Israeli missile boats sank four Komar missile boats and one Osa torpedo boat in a skirmish in the Mediterranean off Latakia, Syria.

According to the announcement, the Israeli gunners used their home-made Gabriel sea-to-sea missile for the first time in combat to sink the Arab vessels. It said all the missiles fired by the Syrians missed their mark.

At 2:30 a.m. Sunday (8:30 p.m. MDT Saturday) Damascus radio interrupted its regular broadcasts to report the Syrians had won the naval battle off Latakia, Syria's largest Mediterranean coastal city, 170 miles north of Israel.

In a two-hour battle with rockets and torpedoes, the radio said, the Syrians sank four Israeli gunboats, including a command vessel, and damaged two others. The report said two Israeli helicopters were shot down and that the Israelis then left the area.

Related stories, p. 6

Damascus also reported continued ground, tank and artillery fighting between the Syrian and Israeli forces.

Egyptian communiques reported its troops and tanks crossed the Suez Canal in several places and captured most of the Israeli-occupied eastern bank but that the Israelis counterattacked after dark and that fierce fighting was underway.

The war began on Yom Kippur, the holiest day of Judaism, and both Syria and Egypt said Israel attacked first. Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban, speaking at a New York news conference, called this an "odious lie" and said "we are throwing them back."

Dayan, in his prediction of victory within a few days, said his troops were preparing to mount a counteroffensive on their own terms and that "we will wipe them out." He said the objective of the Israeli action now will be to win the war and inflict heavy casualties on the enemy.

The Egyptian thrust across the Suez Canal in the south and the Syrian attack against the Israeli-held Golan Heights in the north began at 2 p.m. (6 a.m. MDT), the military command said, first with air raids, then on the ground.

Dayan said a number of Israeli positions on the canal were lost and at least one on the heights was captured. He put Israeli casualties in the "tens" and said the Arabs had suffered "many more."

The battling continued on both fronts, the command said, with the Syrian troops taking heavy losses and failing to penetrate Israel's defense lines while the Egyptians were unable to extend their penetration past the canal front line.

Tank moves up

ISRAELI Centurion tank moves up to the Syrian border while a Phantom jet flies overhead during fighting in the Golan Heights Saturday. Israel reported victories in the air, on the sea and in the occupied Golan Heights over Egyptian and Syrian forces. (UPI)

today in brief

UN confirms troop movements

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — A United Nations spokesman said Saturday U.N. peace observers had confirmed that Egyptian troops crossed the Suez Canal 1967 cease-fire line at five points and that Syrian troops crossed the Golan Heights truce line at two spots.

The spokesman said there was no confirmation that Israeli troops had crossed the cease-fire lines.

US sailors called back

NAPLES, Italy (UPI) — The Pentagon said Saturday Vice Adm. Daniel J. Murphy, commander of the U.S. Sixth Fleet in the Mediterranean, canceled all shore leaves and ordered sailors in the Athens area back to their ships.

A spokesman for the fleet here said the U.S. Navy was watching the Middle East situation closely, but had no immediate plans to take special action or put the fleet on alert.

Airline strike averted

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Agreeing to pay wage increases of 18 per cent, Eastern Airlines averted a strike of its ground staff at Mexico City's International Airport by minutes Saturday.

Eastern was one of 18 international airlines struck by employees for 20 minutes Wednesday, but the walkout then was postponed 72 hours.

Mining bill stalled

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The chief coal industry spokesman said Saturday the present language of a bill before the Senate to regulate open pit mining could "quickly turn the nation's energy crisis into catastrophe."

The measure, sponsored by Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., comes up for consideration Monday and is expected to touch off an intense debate between environmentalists and those who feel the so-called strip or surface mining is necessary to solve the nation's energy problems.

Strip mining would be strictly regulated, and mined land would have to be restored to its approximate original contour. Unrestored land, a long gash in the earth with a pile of dirt beside it, is unusable for any other purpose.

Shultz winds up talks

BEIGRADE (UPI) — U.S. Treasury Secretary George P. Shultz met with President Tito Saturday and wound up his talks with Yugoslav government officials on bilateral economic cooperation.

Shultz, who arrived Friday from Bonn after a six-day visit to the Soviet Union, described his talks in Belgrade as "most successful and productive" and said the United States would work to increase trade with Yugoslavia.

Demo squabble settled

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Democratic rules-writers, trying to frame "no quota" guidelines for selection of their 1976 national convention delegates, Saturday broke a deadlock that had threatened to wipe out months of compromise efforts.

The drafting committee of the 73-member Democratic Delegate Selection Commission voted 10 to 5 to revise a controversial 1972 rule that required states to send convention delegations comprised of women, blacks and young people "in reasonable relationship to their presence in the population."

Two killed in MV

BURLEY — Two persons were killed Saturday in separate Magic Valley traffic accidents.

In a third accident, a two-year old Twin Falls youth sustained critical injuries when a car backed over him as he played in a driveway near his home.

An Oakley woman died when she drove her vehicle into the path of a train at a crossing 50 feet west of the Burley city limits. Susan Elaine Pauley, 27, was pronounced dead at the scene.

State Policeman Leo Davis said the woman was pinned under her vehicle by the collision with the northbound train.

An unidentified man was killed in a second accident at the other end of the Magic Valley. State police said the man was killed when his truck, bearing Nevada license plates, plunged off the road and down a steep embankment, throwing him onto a barbed wire fence.

The accident occurred near the junction of Interstate 80 and State Highway 25 about one mile west of Jerome.

In the third accident of the weekend, Magic Valley Memorial Hospital officials said Adam Wojcik, 2, son of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Wojcik, Twin Falls, was in critical condition more than 24 hours after he was injured while playing in a driveway.

Authorities said the youth was removed from beneath the vehicle before an ambulance arrived and rushed to the hospital. He is suffering from multiple injuries.

Dairyman Albert Jagels dies at 80

Buhl — Albert H. Jagels, 80, long time leader in the dairy industry and a prominent Holstein breeder before his retirement, died Friday in a Buhl nursing home.

Mr. Jagels came to the Clover area in 1919 as one of the early settlers there. He came to Idaho from Nebraska and during his association with the dairy industry served as president of the Idaho Dairyman's Association the Idaho Purebred Holstein Breeders Association, Idaho Cooperative Council, Challenge Cream and Butter Association and the Jerome Coop Creamery. He was also president of the Western States Bean Conference.

Funeral services will be Tuesday at 2 p.m. with the Dickard Funeral Home in charge.

REP. H.T. JOHNSON

AF Dam replacement measure backed

By DALE STEWART
Times News Writer

BURLEY — Two small islands of doubt failed to stem Saturday's flood of support for legislation authorizing non-federal replacement of the weakened American Falls Dam.

Virtually all testimony presented at a four-hour hearing on pending legislation before the water and power resources subcommittee of the U. S. House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee endorsed replacement of the dam.

Testifying in support of the bill were Gov. Cecil D. Andrus, members of the Idaho Congressional delegation, and representatives of spenceholders in the American Falls Reservoir. About 200 persons filled the hearing room at the Ramada Inn.

Following the hearing, the four subcommittee members — including Rep. Harold T. Johnson, D-Calif., the chairman — and others inspected the dam.

The measure now under consideration in the House of Representatives would allow the American Falls Reservoir District to replace the existing dam — weakened by deteriorating concrete — through a bond issue, and to contract for partial payment of construction costs through a "falling water" lease to Idaho Power Co. That water would generate electricity at a new power plant below the new dam. On completion, the dam would be turned over to the Bureau of Reclamation to operate.

The utility has offered to pay up to $10 million toward retirement of the bond issue. Estimated cost of the dam range from $25 million to $31 million, and with the power plant included, the cost would be around $51 million.

Much of Saturday's testimony — both written and oral — centered on the need to replace the existing dam to provide adequate irrigation water for more than 800,000 acres in south Idaho. Other points covered included fish and wildlife, erosion control, the need for a modern highway crossing to serve residents and industries in the Aberdeen area, and erosion control.

Negative testimony came from Gus Engstrom Jr., Declo, and Mrs. Angela Butterfield, speaking on behalf of the Fort Hall Shoshone-Bannock-Indian Tribal Council.

Expressing a fear of loss of control, Engstrom called for water users to float bonds, to build the dam and power plant without Idaho Power aid. He said he felt there is "a joker in the deck somewhere." In the utility's proposal, Engstrom was among four persons who spoke at the close of the hearing who were not among listed witnesses.

TF officials hint zone law pullback

By DAVID ESPO
Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS — A controversial proposed zoning ordinance for Twin Falls County appears headed back to the county zoning commission.

Speaking in separate interviews Saturday the chairman of both the zoning group and county commission said they favored such a plan. The informal agreement gives new life to a proposed 300-foot agricultural setback along much of the Snake River Canyon north of Twin Falls.

It also makes possible the insertion of procedural amendments officials say are needed in the basic proposed ordinance as well as in two other companion measures.

The county commission will meet this week with members of the zoning commission — whom they appoint — to discuss the future of the three proposals.

I. James Koutnik, a realtor and chairman of the zoning commission, said Saturday he thought the group would recommend the ordinances be referred back to its members.

But speaking for himself, he said, "I'm not so sure a sanitary corridor running through the county is the best thing." Koutnik also said he would support residential developments along the canyon rim "under certain circumstances." These circumstances would vary with the proposed housing to be built and the developer, he said.

But Koutnik agreed such developments would have to be accomplished through variances in a basic zoning ordinance, or else through proposed new subdivision ordinances or planned unit development ordinances.

County Commission Chairman William L. Chancey also said he thought the ordinances should be sent back to the zoning commission.

State board brings suit

TWIN FALLS — The Idaho Department of Highways board has brought condemnation proceedings in Fifth Judicial District Court against John C. and Ruth Rushton, Twin Falls.

The highway board seeks the two pieces of property owned by the Rushtons in connection with widening and improving Highway 93 along Addison Avenue. The couple owns two pieces of property, known as Parcel 32 and Parcel 32-R extending along Seventh Avenue North to Addison Avenue. In their condemnation proceedings, the highway board states they have attempted to negotiate in good faith for the purchase of the property without success. The state board asks the court to rule in favor of their condemnation request and to establish an appraisal of the property at a fair value to the defendants and plaintiffs.

Country music program at CSI

TWIN FALLS — Activities this week at the College of Southern Idaho begin with the Magic Valley Country Music program in the Fine Arts Auditorium Monday and Tuesday nights at 8 p.m.

The program is open to the public featuring leading country music bands and artists from throughout the area.

Other events include the Monday holiday with no school for CSI students and faculty members; a student board program Tuesday at noon in the student conference room; an orientation meeting for games desk and information desk employees at noon Wednesday in the student conference room; a football game at 4 p.m. on campus; an alcohol safety program at 7 p.m. and a movie "Portnoy's Complaint" at 8 p.m., all on Wednesday.

Thursday will feature a student senate meeting at 1 p.m.; a ski club meeting at 4 p.m. and coffee house entertainment, "Kerry Pederson" at 8 p.m. in the Eagle's Nest.

Friday will feature a cross country track meet between CSI and Brigham Young University at Provo and Sunday an auto gymkana will be held all day in the west parking lot. The CSI band concert will be held at 3 p.m. in the auditorium and is free to the public.

Suit filed

TWIN FALLS — Thirty-seven former employees of Sun Valley Processing Inc., Twin Falls, have filed suit in Fifth Judicial District Court for alleged back wages due them.

Jewel Ruby and 36 other former employees are asking a total of $4,000 in unpaid wages, the complaint states, and $12,000 in penalty wages collectively. They also ask the court to award attorney fees to the plaintiffs.

In the complaint, the plaintiffs say they were employed by Sun Valley Processing Inc., until being laid off without payment of wages due.

School needs told at Hansen

HANSEN — Robert Pettygrove, school trustee, spoke on building additional elementary classrooms and why a bond election is necessary at the teacher's reception Thursday night held at the schoolhouse-luncheon room.

Classes are somewhat larger now than they were last year, and with the new mobile court being filled as spaces are ready, and with a proposed housing unit going in within the next year, facilities for elementary grades are not sufficient, he said.

E. D. Crockett, PTA president, welcomed the teachers and school board members, and introduced his program chairman for the year.

Staff personnel were presented with corsages or boutonnieres. Cecil Stanger gave the invocation, and Crockett led the salute to the flag.

The group voted to send three voting delegates to the State PTA convention at McCall Oct. 19-20. The second grade won the room count trophy.

Executive board members were the hosts.

CSI aide heads TF Kiwanians

TWIN FALLS — Gerald R. Meyerhoeffer, an administrative official at the College of Southern Idaho, is new president of the Twin Falls Kiwanis Club. He succeeds Jack Muldoon and will serve for the 1973-74 year.

Installation of club officers and the awarding of citations featured the regular session at the Turf Club Thursday noon. Gordon Co. Cox, lieutenant-governor for district 5, Utah-Idaho district, was installing officer.

In addition to Meyerhoeffer, other officers are Stanley Snow, first vice president; Richard R. Reed, second vice president; Claude Brown, Jr., treasurer; W. W. Frantz, secretary; Bill Babcock, Karl Black, John Bennett, H. P. (Oz) Nelson, Bob Ellis, Dan O'Brien, Herb Can Slyke, Dr. Dan Slavin and James C. Reynolds, director.

Perfect attendance awards went to several members including James Reynolds, 35 years; Claude Brown, 26 years; and Harold D. Cook, 19 years. Legion of honor certificates, signifying a membership of 25 years, went to O. A. (Gus) Kelker, John E. Hahn, Ken Montgomery, Claude Brown Jr., Louis Meigs and Joe McCollum.

U. N. Terry received a special award as a result of 45 years of continuous membership of the local club. Monte Lee Heunover was inducted as a new member.

Seminar for pilots

TWIN FALLS — A Federal Aviation Administration safety seminar for area pilots will be held Wednesday in the Shields Building at the College of Southern Idaho. The meeting will start at 7:30 p.m.

Jack W. Van Delft, Boise, FAA accident prevention specialist, will be in charge.

The Twin Falls session is sponsored by the Idaho 99's, an association of women pilots. Discussion subjects will include flight service station communication procedures, weather briefings and wake turbulence.

Vehicles crash

TWIN FALLS — The drivers of two vehicles involved in a traffic accident Saturday at the intersection of Third Avenue N. and Fourth St. N., escaped injury but both vehicles were damaged extensively.

Laura Gassley, 63, Rupert, driving a 1965 sedan, collided with a vehicle driven by Patty Kay Manske, 17, Twin Falls. Damage was estimated at $1,200 to the 1971 sedan driven by Miss Manske and $1,500 to the vehicle driven by Mrs. Gassley.

A Sensible Report On Our Forests

WASHINGTON — Last week's report from a presidential panel on forest policy may have attracted considerable attention from the West Coast press but it was a one-day story here. The report is important and it deserves more publicity than the lick and a promise that it got.

If you noticed the story at all, you may have noticed that it fell into the Newtonian pattern of journalistic treatment. For every action, there is an equal and opposite reaction. The report was released at the White House, and that was the action; reporters then telephoned the Sierra Club for comment, and the predictable reaction came forth.

Two spokesmen for the Sierra Club thought the report was terrible. Brock Evans, in Washington, was "disappointed but not surprised." He termed the report the latest in a long series of actions by the administration on behalf of the timber industry. Gordon Robinson, in San Francisco, was "shocked." These people, in the White House, said Robinson, "are determined to rip the country up, no matter what."

What aroused the spokesmen, among other things, was the panel's mild reference to the practice of "clearcutting." Among environmentalists, it is one of those emetic words, reluctantly swallowed, and instantly spit up. To speak of "clearcutting" to a professional conservationist, in any approving sense, is like condoning "busing" in the presence of Sen. Thurmond or mentioning "Henry Peterson" to Spiro Agnew. Some words just set some people off.

One result of this Pavlovian syndrome was that locally the papers gave the story 12 column-inches, four to the Sierra Club and eight to the 541-page report. Interested readers can buy the report from the Government Printing Office for $4.80 and make up their own minds. The report struck me as a temperate, sensible and balanced document, evidencing not the slightest trace of any desire to "rip the country up" or to sell out the national forests to the timber barons.

The very first statement by the panel emphasizes that "forest resources are to be cherished, nurtured, and used." The panel recommends the harvesting of timber from our national forests "on a schedule commensurate with their productive capacity." It recommends that logging practices be established that will minimize site disturbances "while at the same time retaining all proven and efficient methods of timber harvest, including clearcutting, under appropriate conditions."

The report documents what every homebuilder has discovered for himself in recent years, that lumber is both scarce and high-priced. Worldwide demand, especially from Japan, has pushed prices on the West Coast out of sight. One reason for the shortage is that our national forests, which have been intended since 1897 "to furnish a continuous supply of timber for the use and necessity of citizens of the United States," have not measured up to their productive capacity. Their actual growth in 1970 was only 39 per cent of potential growth under sound management.

Roughly half of all the softwood sawtimber in the United States is standing on the national forests. The presidential panel makes no recommendation whatever that it all be harvested, leaf and branch, to meet immediate housing needs. On the contrary, the panel recommends nothing more than a carefully planned program of gradual cutting and renewing to maintain "a proper balance between harvesting and inventory."

Such prudent recommendations may be "shocking" to the Sierra Club but they are not likely to strike the unimpassioned observer as a rip-off or a sell-out. The timber is there. With intelligent regard to the interests of birds, animals, fish and human beings who like to look at a beautiful forest, that timber ought to be put to social use. It would be folly to pursue the policy of letting the trees grow up and rot.

MR. SPECTATOR

That "Old" Gray-Haired Pilot

All gray-haired pilots are not "old" but we contend there is a certain feeling of security when the fellow in the left seat of the world's biggest jetliner — the 747 — is gray-haired.

The other day we (and Mrs. Spectator) were seated in a Trans World Airlines lounge at the John F. Kennedy Airport in New York City. We were having a cup of coffee in the time before boarding call when we spotted a TWA Captain seated at a nearby table.

He looked mighty like a TWA captain we had seen on TV a few days prior to that time, in a story illustrating the jet "time lag" pilots must go through as they race around the world into and out of the various time zones. Mrs. Spectator suggested we ask him if he was, in fact, that same pilot.

So we did — introducing ourselves as a newspaper editor from Idaho. This particular captain said he wasn't the guy, although he had been with the company for 37 years. It was then that I made the classic remark that "old gray-haired pilots" in the cockpit instilled a feeling of security.

He introduced himself as Capt. J. S. McCombs. He also introduced his wife who sat with him at the table. Then he asked us where we were going. To Madrid, Spain, on the next flight, we answered collectively. To which he replied:

"Well, I believe that there will be a gray-haired pilot on that flight."

Asking our seat numbers, Capt. McCombs said he would pass the word along that we were on board — that is, in case there was a gray-haired pilot at the controls.

About a half-hour out of New York a uniformed pilot leaned his gray-haired head over our seats and said:

"I thought you might like to meet that old gray-haired pilot who is in command this trip."

By now you have guessed it. The command pilot was Captain McCombs. We found he had been with the line for 37 years, had flown nothing but multi-engine planes in all that time, and that he, his wife and family live in Evergreen, Colo. He commutes from there to New York City for each of his flights. He does it because he likes small town living.

Like we said — there's something nice about "old" gray-haired pilots and Captain McCombs proved he was no exception to the rule.

But that isn't all the story. A few minutes later a comely stewardess came to our seats and asked:

"Are you Gus and Betty?" Receiving an affirmative nod she handed us a tray, two glasses and a bottle of choice wine.

"Compliments of Captain McCombs," she said.

WHY WE ARE AMERICANS
The reason this continent is known as America is because Christopher Columbus, credited with the discovery, didn't have a press agent. History gives a fairly accurate account of the events of Oct. 12, 1492, when Rodrigo de Triana, a crewman on one of the three vessels, first sighted the shores of the land of San Salvador.

The queen of Spain had promised a reward to the first man to sight land, and Triana was given a silk doublet and a purse of gold, a sum amounting to $69.50 in present currency. Columbus returned home, told his story, and was quite a local hero. But he did not give a name to the new country.

Later an Italian historian called it the New World. Still later Americus Vesputius, an Italian adventurer, came over, and on his return must have gone on what nowadays would be called a lecture tour.

Martin Waldseemüller, a German writer, heard his story and was so impressed by it that he proposed to name the country America.

If Columbus had had a good press agent who would have given his discovery the proper publicity, America would probably have been named in his honor. But America or Columbia, it is the greatest spot on earth today, even if the man who first saw it received only $69.50.

HOORAY FOR RHINOVIRUS

Smooth-talking young men for a long time have been telling unbelievable dates that kissing is healthier than shaking hands. Researchers at the University of Virginia

School of Medicine say they have proved the contention.

Hands by far are the most infectious parts of the body, touching as they do many foreign objects, concluded the federally-financed study. The most common route of infection from the hands is to the eyes and nose.

Explaining their findings in the New England Journal of Medicine, the researchers cited a previous study which found one type of cold virus, rhinovirus, which is not transmitted by kissing. The Virginia Scientists found 10 out of 25 persons suffering from rhinovirus had the virus on their hands. Only two out of 25 expelled the virus in a cough or sneeze.

There are many kinds of cold viruses and this study involved only one. But it is one of the few cases on record in which the inevitable romantic has been given scientific assistance. A few more projects of this nature and the depleted ranks of scientists should be overflowing once again. The subjects of inquiry are infinitely more interesting than those old microscope slides.

Airport Question

Site for a Magic Valley Regional Airport — either at the Twin Falls City-County Airport (Joslin Field) or at a new location in Jerome county, seemed more confused than ever after a meeting of city, county and airport authorities here last Thursday evening.

At that session, the Federal Aviation Administration said Joslin Field was a fine airport, with little to hold back necessary expansion but that looking "down the road" 20 or more years a new airport should be constructed somewhere else in the Valley — a Jerome county location would better serve passenger traffic; especially the Sun Valley movement. A Blaine County citizen said he was "not sure" residents there would vote to join the regional authority concept when they get a second opportunity — and soon — to do so. The voter turnout of the first opportunity sometime ago was a real shocker and unexpected.

The Regional Authority, through the chairman, said they were not interested in taking over the operation of Joslin Field as offered by city and county officials of Twin Falls. Not interested unless the voters of the county decide to join the Regional Authority. Voters turned down the opportunity three to one sometime back.

A Twin Falls city official said the present level of government aid would permit the Authority to build a new field without the aid of Twin Falls money. The Regional chairman admitted to a newsmen after the session that this was the case but that the FAA "would like Twin Falls to get in." Another Twin Falls official commented that if another field could, in fact, be built by the five counties then Twin Falls should just let it go that way and after it is built, abandon Joslin Field and use the new airport at no cost whatever. Jerome farmers whose land would be hacked by a new field would probably be pacified by moving the runway site one way or another.

The Regional chairman said he would recommend "this month" that his board approve a site for the airport. He told a newsmen after the meeting it would be in Jerome county, not at Joslin Field.

The biggest user of air freight denied he was dissatisfied with Hughes AirWest service and said he was perfectly willing to continue to use facilities of Joslin Field. He is a resident of Gooding county.

This — and much more — all means that thinking in the pro and con camps of airport retention, improvement or change has not changed and that once more voters of Twin Falls county will be asked, by the Regional Board to mark a ballot indicating whether they want to join the Authority and help pay for a new field, or continue to maintain Joslin Field — the one termed by the FAA as a good airport.

Meanwhile, at Joslin Field, work progresses on a new passenger security structure and baggage claim area, required by the government; the instrument landing system is operative, paid for mostly by government funds; a control tower is scheduled for construction, also with government funds; fire fighting equipment (required by the government) should be delivered within the next two months, paid for by federal and local monies; work is going ahead on a master plan for the field, suggested by the federal government; all-time passenger boarding and freight shipment records are being set by Hughes Air West.

Joys Of Autumn

Poets, amateur and otherwise, have long since been given to penning odes to winter. "Oh, the snow, the beautiful snow" is a favorite phrase although snow is actually a nuisance and disturbs the even tenor of man's ways.

Still others have rhapsodized over spring, the vernal season, in spite of the wind and dust which come with its temperamental weather. "Oh, the flowers that bloom in the spring, tra la," sounds pretty but does not tell the whole story.

Too few persons have been impressed by the beauties of the autumn season. The days when summer's heat has mellowed and all nature has taken on a more leisurely pace. When man can contemplate the results of his labors in the terms of harvest, each day a benediction.

To those who consider September the best and most rewarding of all months, this is a period to rejoice. Everything continues to work according to an ancient plan that ordains year's rhythmic cycles.

The wild birds are flying south. Forgotten are the joys of spring, the activities of summer, in the glorious days of autumn, each month of which has its own sterling virtues.

ANDREW TULLY

Secret Government Of The Rich?

WASHINGTON — That Gallup Poll showing that 65 per cent of those interviewed favor financing of Federal campaigns by the U.S. Treasury suggests that it finally has occurred to Main Street that the nation — just might wind up under a secret government of rich men.

President Nixon didn't invent this system of furtive covenants furtively arrived at, although his campaign chiefs in 1972 set a world record by raising an appalling $60.2 million. To name just a couple of predecessors, neither Ike Eisenhower nor John Kennedy went around gratuitously insulting big contributors to their campaigns. Even the bearded Woodrow Wilson had his little coterie of fat cats he regularly consulted on major issues.

But even allowing for the sleaziness of big-time politics, there is something especially sordid in the revelation — forced by a court order — that the Nixon campaign secretly raised more than $5-million nearly $1.5 million of it in cash, in the 48-hour period, before a new Federal disclosure law took effect on April 7, 1972. In all, just under $30-million was contributed before the legislation became law.

This should tell even the village idiot that those wonderful folks who opened their fat purses didn't want their fellow citizens to know they were doing so. Why? I don't know, but I have the inalienable right to wonder about the motives involved. Presidential candidates tend to think kindly thoughts about people whose dough helped them win the Big Banana.

One of the contributors who had the right to figure his donation would never be revealed was financier Robert L. Vesco, who gave $200,000 — (naturally?) cash. Vesco now is under indictment with former Atty. Gen. John Mitchell — and former Commerce Secretary Maurice Stans for obstruction of justice in a Securities and Exchange Commission Case.

Another philanthropist was Calvin Kovens, head of a Florida construction company, who gave $30,000, also in currency. (If you think these cash transactions have a Mafia flavor, you said it. I didn't.) Anyway, Kovens was convicted of mail-fraud with Jimmy Hoffa, ex-president of the Teamsters Union. Senate Watergate committee testimony has disclosed that Kovens was pardoned early from a Federal prison in January 1972.

Then there is the matter of "prepayments" for campaign purchases. The General Accounting Office's regulations prohibit concealing such "prepayments" for services performed after April 7, 1972.

Just so. But come on, the "citizens' lobby," Common Cause, to offer evidence that the Nixon reelection committee secretly spent $5-million on April 5 and 6, 1972 alone, in "prepayments." These included 2.5-million paid to the Reuben Donnelly Corp. on April 6 for direct mail advertising; $1-million to Walter Weintz & Co., for "mailing"; $25,000 to the official Republican Party advertising company, and $120,000 to Market Opinion Research for "polling."

Well now. It is no fun kicking people when they're down, but the kindest thing that can be said about all this is that the Nixon committee should not be confused with a panel of Eagle Scouts. Indeed, the committee in effect finally admitted as much.

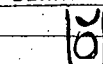

Although the committee contended that under the pre-April 7 law, it had no obligation to disclose gifts or expenditures, it did agree to an interim pre-election compromise and identified the donors of some $6-million between January 1971 and March 9, 1972 — releasing the data five days before last November's election. Finally, Common Cause won a court order for the names of contributors during the period between March 10 and April 7, 1972. Only then did the committee come totally clean.

A Thought

Teach me, O Lord, by way of thy statutes; and I will keep it to the end. Give me understanding, that I may keep the law and observe it with my whole heart. — Psalm 119:33,34.

To live in the presence of great truths and eternal laws, to be led by permanent ideals — that is what keeps a man patient when the world ignores him, and calm and unspoiled when the world praises him. — Honore de Balzac, French novelist.

The Democrats Are In Turmoil

WASHINGTON — The Democrats in this country are in a turmoil. Do they support the President of the United States, the Vice President or the Department of Justice?

McNulty, an ardent Democrat, told me, "We've never had a problem like this. In the past, if you were against the President, automatically you were against the Vice President. And if you were the party out of power, you never trusted the Department of Justice, either. But now that they're at each other's throats, I don't know whom to support."

"Do you have to support anybody?"

"Of course I do. What kind of American would I be if I didn't take sides?"

"Well, whose side are you on?"

"I tend to lean toward Agnew emotionally, though my sense of justice makes me want this matter settled in the courts."

"Don't you have any sympathy for the President?"

"Of course. Nixon asked his Vice President to take a flying leap out of the window, and Agnew refused to do it. It's very hard to run the country if your own Vice President doesn't follow orders."

"I'm not clear where you stand, McNulty."

"Neither am I. It's easy to put myself in the Vice President's position. No one wants to jump out of that window, even if he's ordered to do so by the President. At the same time, if he doesn't jump, the President may have no choice but to push him out."

"How do you know Nixon asked Agnew to take a flying leap out of the window?"

"Everyone knows that," McNulty said. "Don't forget there have been an awful lot of leaks coming out of the White House and the Justice Department. If we're to believe Agnew, there are people in the Administration who are out to destroy him politically. I'm very sympathetic with him on this score. A man should not be tried in the press, particularly a Vice President."

"I'm glad to hear you say that, McNulty."

"At the same time, a man must not be allowed to escape punishment if he's committed a crime, which I'm not saying Agnew did. Had the Justice Department been more vigilant about Watergate, the American people would have known the truth about it at the very beginning."

"Who told you that?"

"Agnew said it last Saturday in California. He said the reason he was being persecuted was because the Justice Department botched Watergate."

"Do you agree with that?"

"Not if I believe Atty. Gen. Richardson's assurances that there is nothing personal in the grand jury hearings in Baltimore County, which could or could not produce an indictment of Agnew."

"I hope it doesn't," I said.

"I do, too, because it would place a great strain on President Nixon. It's not easy to keep the country's confidence when you have an indicted Vice President working for you, particularly one who won't resign."

"I hate to say this but you seem to be fence-straddling," I said.

"It isn't my fault. The Republicans got the Democrats into this dilemma. We've never had to choose sides between their President and Vice President before. I tell you it's driving me crazy with grief."

"You're just saying that, McNulty. You seem to be enjoying the whole mess."

McNulty got into his car, lit up a big cigar, smiled and said, "Who me?"

BRUCE BIOSAT

Going Round-Round

WASHINGTON (NEA) — Maybe only the Democrats, while talking more party reform, can manage to touch on some very profound political issues and contrive simultaneously to give their work the faint air of a Woody Allen script.

Part of the reason is that the present chairman of the party's Commission on Delegate Selection and Party Structure is a sawed-off shotgun named Barbara Mikulski, member of the Baltimore city council.

She has no illusions about how she got the job. She was elevated from vice chairman when the first chairman resigned. Says she in a short news conference:

"I know Leonard Woodcock (president of United Auto Workers) was the heavy, and I was riding side-car on the motorcycle."

That's misleading. Plump, round-faced, buoyantly cheerful, Chairman Mikulski nevertheless wields decisive command over the 73-member commission, makes tough judgments whose force often is concealed by her bubbly personality.

The hard hand is needed to give some semblance of direction to a wide assortment of Democrats whose "debate" on key reform issues can get as convoluted as Woody Allen's chatter as he breathlessly explains his philosophy to his new girl.

The big thing the Democrats are trying to dispose of is the quota system in selection of national convention delegates. Their previous reform commission (McGovern-Fraser) explicitly avoided it, saying only that state parties should take "affirmative steps" to see that minorities, women, the young, were represented in "reasonable relationship" to their presence.

In 1972, the trouble was militants in some states forced quotas. In others, parties applied them to avoid Credentials Committee challenges of inadequate representation.

It all came to a boil when the newcomers, loosely arrayed under the "new politics" banner and frequently aligned with Sen. George McGovern's candidacy, tangled with the standard politicians and sometimes barred them and their slates from any representation at Miami.

Aside from gratuitous slaps at these oldies (most conspicuous was Chicago's Mayor Richard Daley), the root problem was and is how to achieve balance while using democratic processes, including primaries, whose results can't be forecast or controlled.

Well, the Democrats' two-day reform commission sessions show they're still hung up on that one, not to mention deciding just how "affirmative" affirmative steps toward balanced selection have to be.

But there's much more going on in these Democratic hairsplitters. Does party rule take precedence over state law? A pending Illinois court case may help on that one. Should primaries where people speak in some numbers, be controlling, or should other mechanisms be allowed into the act?

Winner-take-all state primaries are now dead and in 1976 losers will get a proportionate share of the delegate vote. But how far to go with this proportional business?

In states with caucus-convention setups, where the committed, organized folk pour out to gain places, who represents the unrepresented "casual" Democrat probably dominant in numbers though staying home? Some say the broadly elected officials are best and should be delegates. Argue that, and you're back to Woody Allen, weaving his unfathomable intricacies. Page Xikulski!

ROWLAND EVANS & ROBERT NOVAK

Are There "Savages" In The Kremlin?

WASHINGTON — A quickly spreading report from London that "savages" have taken over the Soviet high command in a fundamental shift, threatening a preemptive nuclear strike against Communist China, is not only unsubstantiated by known facts, but is also totally denied by U. S. government experts.

To these close students of the Kremlin, recent changes in the military hierarchy seem routine rather than exotic, modest in number, without discernible significance. Consequently, the changes are not viewed as increasing the prospect of a Soviet attack against China which would transform world power relationships and risk nuclear holocaust.

Indeed, a computerized study by government experts just completed places the possibility of an attack at only 6 percent, about one chance in 17. Such studies are far from precise, but they do reflect the expert consensus here. Although some high policymakers deeply fear that the danger of a Soviet strike against China could rapidly escalate if U. S.

Soviet detente collapses (perhaps over the issue of U. S. trade concessions), the experts do not accept even that. Rather, they see chances of an attack diminishing as time passes without much relation to international and domestic developments.

The latest Western jitters over a Soviet preemptive strike appears to originate from a London-based newsletter called "Soviet Analyst," edited by the distinguished historian, Robert Conquest. Its astonishing contention: The Soviet high command has been taken over by "savages."

Partly because of Conquest's reputation, that charge has been repeated by responsible figures in London and Washington in journalism and politics and even in the U. S. Senate. One politician, renowned as an amateur Kremlin-watcher with hard-line credentials, now puts the odds of a Soviet assault at 1 in 4, in large part because of the Soviet command change.

But how much change has there really been? Between September 1971 and February 1973 there have been nine biting changes in top levels of the command structure, including General of the Army V. G. Kulikov as army chief of staff, not much different from the two-year turnover in the U. S. military. The other officers they replaced were retired.

Of the nine changes, six are new faces. Lt. Gen. Naumenko, Volga military district commander; Col. Gen. Melnikov, Transcaucasian commander; Gen. Tolubko, strategic rockets force chief; Lt. Gen. Tenishev, commander of the 50,000 troops still patrolling Czechoslovakia; Col. Gen. Tankayev, chief of military education institutes; and Col. Gen. Shavrov, general staff school commandant.

Little is known about these half-dozen officers, aside from the fact that they are in their mid-50s and therefore younger than recent senior Soviet officers. But there is no shred of evidence to indicate they are "savages" or promoters of a preemptive strike against China.

On the contrary, the Soviet military is believed to feel the optimum time for preemptive strike has now passed, with Chinese deterrent power having reached the point where Peking's rapidly multiplying array of missiles simply could not be knocked out in a first counter-force strike. Moreover, such a chilling adventure grows riskier every day.

Nor is there convincing evidence of Soviet preparation for an attack. The frequently cited figure of nearly 1 million Soviet troops "poised on the Chinese border" may be illusory. Knowledgeable U. S. experts believe many of those troops are in Siberia far from the frontier and the border divisions are under strength. They calculate actual Soviet effectiveness on the frontier between 400,000 and 500,000, scarcely overwhelming considering that they are outnumbered two-to-one by Chinese forces.

The real explanation of speculation about a preemptive strike is not exaggerated reports of changes in the Soviet high command and not Soviet troops massing on the border. Almost certainly, it is incessant warnings from Communist China. Whether it be Prime Minister Chou En-lai lecturing a foreign head of state or an embassy third secretary pontificating at a reception in some distant African capital, the message is the same: the wily Kremlin, under protection of U. S. Soviet detente, is plotting to destroy China's nuclear arms.

That message is embraced by Western critics of detente, who justifiably fear U. S. disarmament concessions while the Kremlin continues its inexorable arms buildup. But that buildup, worrisome indeed to the West over the long haul, is scarcely proof of intent to attack China.

As a class, Kremlinologists tend to hedge their bets. But not on this issue. Even if Mao's "Great Leap Forward" were to die and even if China were to plunge into political anarchy, they say, chances of a preemptive strike would be only marginally higher. These experts simply cannot discern any fire- eaters on the general staff thirsting for nuclear combat. Meanwhile, the Kremlin civilians, mostly stodgy bureaucrats, seem solidly in command.

RAY CROMLEY

The Next Generation And War

WASHINGTON (NEA) — One of the most disturbing stories to come out of Vietnam in some time has been called by neutrals from the statements of North Vietnamese prisoners. These interviews, hidden in reports to home governments, tell of the organized regular movement of children from South Vietnam to the North.

The children, according to this information, are being moved along the regular Communist South-North transportation routes in some numbers.

The current reports do not give the reason for this movement. But it is not difficult to guess, if we recall an interview this reporter had recently with an officer who was held by the Viet Cong for five years. This highly intelligent, observant man said that the VC spent much time in the hamlets where he was held luring young people away from their parents, getting them to disobey, spy on and publicly denounce their fathers and mothers in the most ruthless ways.

Selected youngsters from age seven on were regularly sent to North Vietnam during this period for extensive education and training. Hanoi and the VC were working for the long pull. The youngsters would live, study, be indoctrinated and prepared for political operations and guerrilla maneuvers until they reached adulthood. Then they would be sent back south to carry on the struggle.

What the continuation of this practice today means is that the fight will continue into another generation with new cadres of men and women. How long it will be before the Hanoi planners are ready is not clear. But a 10- to 15-year period of preparation and basic building is a short spell in this kind of war.

There's nothing unusual about this technique among Communists. Many of the men who now run North Korea were trained as very young men outside the country for years before the takeover. Communists today regularly take youngsters from Thailand and Laos for lengthy training. They have, in fact, done this for a long time.

Much of the early fighting in South Vietnam was done by young men who had been taken to the North as children.

The operation proved successful in Vietnam until large numbers of the displaced youngsters died, were killed or became disillusioned. When North Vietnam had too few Southern replacements, it was forced to rely on its own mainline armies as an invasion force.

But at this point, the North found its armies ineffective without a trained Southern underground. The sorting out of residents in occupied areas was intensified. As usual, the old and the sick were moved out to be supported by Saigon, the "untrustworthy" who might spark resistance or dissent were killed or shuffled out, the men and women suitable as unskilled laborers recruited.

But the greatest emphasis was on selecting those who would be trained for future roles. Teenagers, subteens and children under 10 have been special targets.

There's something chilling about taking seven, eight and nine-year-old children, shipping them to another country and recruiting them thinking for a takeover of their homeland. There's no way to prevent it. But there is an antidote.

Regardless of the training and its intensity, once the brainwashed young men and women are stationed in a land apart from their trainers, once they see a much different world from what they've been told about, they become much less "reliable." Their usefulness, therefore, is limited to countries or areas where the citizenry has lost hope and the trainees see little to make them believe their brainwashers were wrong.

They would be ineffective in a democratic and economically prosperous South Viet Nam.

Isn't what worries me. You do. When you get to the stage of shooting junk into the veins; you may not be addicted today but might be tomorrow.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: When a man has either syphilis or gonorrhea, is one of the symptoms definitely burning when he urinates? In other words, if a man doesn't burn when he urinates, he doesn't have venereal disease. Am I correct? — R. M.

No, sir, you are not correct. That symptom will expose many; although not all, cases of gonorrhea.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have used heroin and smoked pot, also recently tried a new drug called "Mexican mud," used in the vein also. All unware to my wife.

She now wants to have a baby. Is it possible for her to have a healthy, normal baby? Please help me. I don't have an addiction. This has been going for a year or more. — W. G.

Your wife probably could have a normal child, but that

GEORGE C. THOSTESON, M.D.

The Doctor Says

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I was told four years ago that I had rheumatoid arthritis. My doctor told me when it bothered me to take aspirin and otherwise forget about it. It doesn't bother me much, but I wonder if I should be on medication. Would you please me to see a rheumatologist? — Mrs. J. B.

There's something about your letter — your attitude, and your doctor's — which makes me wonder whether you have rheumatoid arthritis or have some other form of arthritis.

There are many varieties of arthritis, and although some people almost automatically append the word "rheumatoid" — they aren't all rheumatoid — fortunately, for true rheumatoid arthritis is the most dangerous form of arthritis.

It can exist, true, in father milid form. It also can be so severe that without the most careful treatment it can be devastating and crippling. You will find the different types of arthritis outlined in my booklet, "How You Can Control Arthritis," and I recommend that you read it. Send 35 cents for printing and handling costs, and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to me in care of Times-News. After reading the booklet, you will have more basis for finding answers to your questions.

For the moment, my suggestions would include asking your doctor directly whether your arthritis is rheumatoid or isn't. (Have you seen your doctor since you first saw him four years ago?) If you learn that, for example, you really have osteoarthritis, not rheumatoid, that will have quite a bearing on your course of action. In that case, aspirin to ease the aching, applications of heat if necessary, and sufficient movement to prevent joints from becoming excessively stiffened — those will probably be all you need in view of your remark that "it doesn't bother me much."

If your arthritis is indeed rheumatoid, you may benefit by a continuing use of aspirin (not just when it bothers you), since rheumatoid arthritis has the nasty habit of ebbing for a period, then flaring up. What you must aim at doing is forestalling these flare-ups if you can.

Should you see a rheumatologist? If you really have rheumatoid arthritis, I think it would be wise if for no other reason than to have made contact in advance in case the disease has a dangerous flare-up.

He would be the one to advise whether you need medication other than aspirin. But in view of the way things sound now, I wouldn't think another medication is indicated. It is the future course of your condition which will dictate the answer to that.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am 13 years old and have not been circumcised. Off the streets I heard that "pregnancy cannot be brought about if the male is not circumcised. Tell me if this is true or not, and if I can be circumcised at this age. — R. J.

No, there's absolutely no truth to what you heard. If you have any lingering doubts, then ask yourself how prehistoric man managed to have children before there was any such thing as surgery.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have been told by a friend that pneumonia is contagious. Is this true? — Mrs. M.G.M.

Usually yes. There are various types of pneumonia, but most cases are caused by a bacterium (usually pneumococcus) or a virus.

Others taking care of a pneumonia patient should be cautious, and the patient should muffle his coughing to avoid spraying germs where others might breathe them.

What causes "balance" trouble? What can be done to correct or overcome it? Dr. Thosteson's booklet, "Dizzy Spells," discusses loss of balance, vertigo and nausea, Meniere's disease, and labyrinthitis. For a copy write to him in care of this newspaper enclosing 35 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed (use zip code), stamped envelope.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes all reader-mail, but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: After having had a mastectomy, I think it is all wrong. I am sorry I ever had it. No matter how many people try to paint a rosy picture, believe me, it is anything but that! What is your opinion on the benefit of such an operation? Why must the whole breast be taken? — Mrs. R.

I don't know what you mean by anyone "painting a rosy picture" of what is, obviously, a serious operation. Certainly never have.

In most cases it is started because cancer has performed in the breast. It leaves no choice.

In fewer cases, multiple cysts in the breast can be so aggravating that surgery becomes preferable. The entire breast has to be removed because of the nature of cancer — if a few invisible cells have spread to surrounding tissue, the cancer will keep on growing.

If the surgery is for cysts, removal of all of the cysts is necessary for comfort — and in cases of cysts that are serious the cysts usually are pretty well scattered throughout the breast tissue.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am 21 and an occasional drug user. I have used heroin and smoked pot, also recently tried a new drug called "Mexican mud," used in the vein also. All unware to my wife.

She now wants to have a baby. Is it possible for her to have a healthy, normal baby? Please help me. I don't have an addiction. This has been going for a year or more. — W. G.

Israel: Dayan proclaims 'new Middle East war'

TEL AVIV (UPI)—Egyptian and Syrian tanks and troops swarmed into Israeli positions on two widely separated fronts Saturday in what Defense Minister Moshe Dayan called a new Middle East War. Fighting continued into the night and spread to the sea, where Israel said it sank five Syrian boats. Dayan accused the Arabs of starting the "all-out war" and predicted Israel would finish it with a victory "in the next few days." He said his troops were preparing to mount a counter-offensive on their own terms.

The Egyptian thrust across the Suez Canal in the south and the Syrian attack against the Israeli-held Golan Heights in the north began at 2 p.m. (6:00 a.m. local time). The Syrian attack was first with air raids, then on the ground.

An Israeli military correspondent reported that "fierce battles" were continuing on into Sunday morning along the northern sector of the canal.

Dayan said a number of Israeli positions on the canal were lost and at least one on the heights was captured. He put Israeli casualties in the "tens" and said the Arabs had suffered "many more."

The Syrian-Israeli battle spread to the sea front late in the day when Israeli missile boats sank four Syrian missile boats and one Osan torpedo boat in a skirmish in the Mediterranean off Latakia, Syria, 120 miles north of the Israeli border.

The Israeli announcement said the Israeli gunners used their batteries for the first time in combat to sink the Arab vessels. It said all the missiles fired by the Syrians missed their mark.

By midnight, the Israeli defenders in the north were reported to have regained all lost ground, while soldiers in the south were counterattacking the Egyptian bridgeheads all along the canal.

The battling continued on both fronts, the command said, with the Syrian troops taking heavy losses and failing to penetrate Israel's defense lines while the Egyptians were unable to extend their penetration past the canal front line.

Nightfall ended aerial battles over both war zones, the command said, after the Egyptian and Syrian air forces suffered "heavy losses" compared with "minor Israeli losses." In one battle the Israelis said they shot down 10 Egyptian helicopters carrying 30 men each.

"I want to make sure that everyone has the true picture," Dayan told a news conference. "That Syria and Egypt started the war again—and it is an all-out war."

Dayan said a number of Israeli positions on the Suez had been lost and at least one on the Golan Heights. He put Israeli casualties in the "tens" and said the Arabs had suffered "many more" in the opening day of fighting.

"We believe, and with good reason, that we can beat them. The battle will end in our victory in the next few days."

"If we had opened the war" with preventive strikes in response to the intelligence attacks, Dayan said, "We would have found ourselves on the other side of the Suez Canal."

"We did not want to open up in a preventive war," he said. "We did not want to create a situation in which it would be said that we opened the war when we did not open the war. We are permitting ourselves to conduct such a policy because we believe, and I think with reason, that in the end, even this way, we can beat them and their ally, the Soviet Union."

Dayan, in his customary khaki uniform, said Israel reacted to intelligence reports of an Arab buildup with a partial mobilization of its reserves. More reserves were being called up, he said.

"We now find ourselves in a transition period between opening fire on the other side, although we are prepared for it, and the time when we reach full strength. That time is not far away."

The thrusts by Egypt across the Suez Canal in the south and by Syria against the Israeli-held Golan Heights in the north began at 2 p.m. (6:00 a.m. MDT), the military command said. Fighting continued into the night.

Dayan said the Egyptians could be expected to succeed temporarily in any big crossing attempt at the Suez Canal line.

The military command said the Egyptians had forged a number of bridgeheads along the 162-mile waterway under an umbrella of artillery fire and air strikes. Two were opened by stretching bridges across the 150-yard channel.

The defense minister said that while the situation of the Golan Heights was "reasonable," with Syria making what he called "insignificant" advances, the Egyptians could be expected to pour more men and machines across the canal during the night.

But exact details on the depth of Egyptian and Syrian penetration into Israeli-held territory, captured from the Arab nations in the 1967 six-day war, were not immediately known.

Dayan said "I would have been surprised if they hadn't managed to cross at some points. I suppose that in the morning they will have more people on our side of the canal. But we are not sitting idly by. We will soon be able to fight the war in our own way."

In general, he said, "This has not been a bad day for us."

Egypt: Suez victory claimed

CAIRO (UPI)—Egyptian tanks and troops crossed the Suez canal Saturday and captured most of the Israeli-occupied Eastern Bank, an Egyptian military spokesman said. When darkness fell, Israeli troops attacked the Egyptian beachhead, another spokesman said.

In a communique issued at 4 p.m. MDT, a military spokesman for the Egyptian high command said:

"The (Israeli) enemy launched an attack after dark today by tanks and mechanized infantry against our forces which crossed the canal, and on a number of directions."

"Our forces were able to face these attacks with success, and crush the enemy, and inflict great losses in personnel and equipment."

"Our forces are still fighting from their positions in the Eastern bank of the Canal."

The communique made no mention of action along the Syrian front with Israel.

A Syrian communique in the afternoon said Syrian troops also had "forced back" the Israelis along the 120-mile Golan Heights borders and had liberated certain key positions.

The claims followed an afternoon of air and ground battles which the Egyptians and Syrians said the Israelis started.

Cairo Radio said Saturday night Egyptian leader Col. Muammar Khadafi, King Hussein of Jordan, Algerian President Houari Boumedienne and the ruler of Kuwait all had informed Egyptian President Anwar Sadat that they were placing "all their resources at his disposal in the Arabs' battle of destiny."

Neither the Egyptian nor the Syrian communique mentioned troops casualties and only two communique mentioned plane losses.

An Egyptian communique said that in a fierce battle over the Suez Canal Israel lost 11 planes and the Egyptians 10. An 8:30 p.m. Syrian communique said Syrian planes shot down three Israeli planes.

In an air battle over the Golan Heights, at least one Israeli plane was shot down. It crashed inside South Lebanon near the Syrian border and the pilot parachuted to safety, Lebanese and Iraqi sources said.

In Beirut, guerrilla saboteurs said there were artillery and machine gun exchanges inside Lebanon near the Syrian border and close to the Golan Heights sector where guerrillas said they had been fighting alongside Syrian troops. The sources said this fighting inside Lebanon was still going on at 8:00 p.m.

In Beirut, Prime Minister Takiyeddin Solh of Lebanon announced:

"Lebanese forces along the border with Israel have got orders to reply firmly and fiercely to any aggression against Lebanon."

The communique, broadcast by Cairo radio at 7:40 p.m., about 5-6 hours after fighting began, said: "Our armed forces succeeded in crossing the Suez Canal all along the confrontation line and most of the Eastern Bank of the canal was captured."

"Our forces at present are continuing their combat with the enemy successfully."

"Our naval forces also protected the flank of our forces on the Mediterranean coast, hitting important enemy targets on the northern coast of the Sinai peninsula and scoring direct hits."

It was the first time since the 1967 war that Egypt occupied positions on the Sinai peninsula.

A Syrian communique broadcast by Damascus Radio said Syrian forces also repulsed an initial Israeli attack in the Israeli-occupied Golan Heights and drove into Syrian-occupied territory with counterattacks.

"Our forces liberated some enemy positions, including the Mount Hermon position," the Syrian communique said.

"Both the Egyptian and Syrian communique said Israel launched the attack first at 1:30 p.m. in the Gulf of Suez region. But they said after fierce air and ground battles, the Arab forces drove back the Israelis and established bridgeheads in Israeli-occupied territory."

In Cairo, there were no signs of the fighting. The city was calm and business went on as usual.

By late afternoon, four hours after the fighting started, no sirens had sounded in the city and there were no signs of panic or special precautions.

US: Kissinger huddles

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, under orders from President Nixon to "take every effort" to end the latest Middle East war, summoned military, diplomatic and intelligence advisers to the White House Saturday night to plan U.S. strategy.

Kissinger flew back in midafternoon from New York City, where he had spent the past week conferring with foreign ministers attending the opening of the U.N. General Assembly, particularly those from Israel and its Arab neighbors.

He alerted the President by telephone in Key Biscayne, Fla., early Saturday morning about indications of serious trouble in the Middle East and, once war erupted, hastened to Washington to take command of U.S. planning in his other role as Nixon's special assistant for national security affairs.

A few hours after Kissinger's return, he activated the Washington Special Action Group, an intimate circle of top advisers from the State Department, the Defense Department, the Central Intelligence Agency and Kissinger's National Security Council staff at the White House.

Kissinger flew into Andrews Air Force Base, Md., under tight security and was whisked away in a limousine headed directly for the State Department for a conference with a special task force set up immediately after fighting began. Kissinger was seen in the back seat of the car leafing through a stack of documents.

Robert J. McCloskey, the State Department's chief spokesman, said Kissinger orders by telephone to "take every effort to see that the (fighting) is brought to a stop."

At the direction of the president, he said, Kissinger contacted the foreign ministers of Israel, Egypt and Syria and Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin immediately after Nixon was informed at 4 a.m. MDT of the "outbreak of fighting. The president ordered Kissinger to make a major diplomatic effort to prevent the fighting from spreading and to get the parties to return to the ceasefire agreement."

"Regrettably, that did not prove to be the case," McCloskey said.

McCloskey said although Kissinger spoke to U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim and Security Council President Sir Lawrence McIntyre of Australia, there were no plans at the moment to call an emergency meeting of the Security Council. But, he said, the United States would not oppose such a move.

McCloskey said that Kissinger had sent messages to King Feisal of Saudi Arabia and King Hussein of Jordan in an effort to stop the fighting.

Battle lines laid in opposition to Agnew subpoenas

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Lawyers for eight major news gathering organizations and the Justice Department laid their strategy Saturday for resisting Vice President Spiro T. Agnew's legal attempt to track down the sources of news leaks about his criminal investigation.

None of the lawyers involved would comment on the subpoenas served Friday—the Justice Department would not even confirm they had been served—in line with U.S. District Judge Walter E. Hoffman's order to remain silent.

But executives of the publications and television networks were unanimous in vowing they would refuse to divulge their reporters' confidential sources under the First Amendment guarantee of freedom of the press.

"We are going to take a course along with other publications to resist the subpoenas," said Newbold Novos, editor of the Washington Star-News. "We are now involved with our attorneys to discuss the proper strategy."

Joseph A. Califano Jr., Washington attorney for The Washington Post and Newsweek magazine, was back at work in his office Saturday after conferring Friday with lawyers for other subpoenaed news organizations. He said his clients considered the subpoenas an "invasion of their rights and the rights of the public under the First Amendment to the Constitution."

The Post quoted an unnamed legal source as saying that Hoffman's extraordinary plan to be present when Agnew's attorneys attempt to take sworn depositions next Thursday raised the possibility that any reporter who refused to identify their sources might be held in contempt and sent to jail almost immediately.

In addition to the Post and Star-News, subpoenas were served on reporters for The New York Times, the New York Daily News, Time and Newsweek magazines, and the CBS and NBC networks.

They were instructed to appear at U.S. District Court in Baltimore Thursday morning with "all writings and other forms of records, including drafts," related to their communications with government employees, or anyone having contact with them, about an investigation of Agnew for possible tax, bribery, extortion and conspiracy violations.

Subpoenas also were reported served at the Justice Department, which refused all comment. The recipients were believed to include Attorney General Elliot L. Richardson, Assistant Attorney General Henry F. Petersen and U. S. Attorney George Beall, who is heading the federal investigation of alleged political corruption in Maryland in which Agnew has been implicated.

Richardson was reported to have brought U.S. Attorney James Thompson from Chicago to handle the news leak controversy for the department. Thompson conferred Friday with Beall in Baltimore and then Richardson and Petersen in Washington.

The department Monday was to give Hoffman its brief replying to Agnew's contention that "malicious and outrageous" news leaks had made it impossible for him to get a fair hearing before the special federal grand jury in Baltimore that is now hearing evidence, involving the vice president, in any subsequent court trial.

Hoffman, who has made it clear he shares Agnew's concern over news accounts of the investigation, has set oral arguments for next Friday on Agnew's motion that the grand jury investigation be halted.

The Justice Department filed a brief Friday opposing Agnew's argument that under the Constitution, he must be impeached, convicted and removed from office by Congress before he can be indicted. The department said only the President is immune from criminal prosecution.

Stay cooler, US asks

WASHINGTON (UPI)—A top government official asked Americans Saturday to reduce the temperature by three degrees in their homes and offices this winter to conserve scarce supplies of heating oil and natural gas.

Deputy Treasury Secretary William E. Simon said lowering every thermostat by three degrees could save 12 per cent of the heating oil expected to be burned in homes and commercial buildings in the cold weather months.

Consumer fuel bills would be slashed by $609 million, he said. He predicted natural gas users would save $322 million and use about 14 per cent less fuel.

The Treasury Department will set an example by reducing its room temperatures three degrees, a department official said. Many government buildings already are trying to save electric power by turning off lights in corridors and other public places.

Simon's suggestion was based on a Treasury study which said winter thermostat settings average about 74 degrees. "A three-degree reduction seems reasonable," he said. "There is a tremendous potential for fuel economies and I know that we are all only too familiar with the experience of being in shops and offices and homes that are overheated almost to the point of discomfort," Simon said.

The do-it-yourself approach to energy conservation followed President Nixon's announcement last Tuesday that heating oil, propane, diesel oil and jet aircraft fuel would be rationed this winter for the first time since World War II.

Administration officials said Nixon's combination of voluntary and mandatory conservation measures are only a stopgap designed to make sure scarce heating fuel gets to the areas where it is needed most this winter.

British troops open Ulster road

BELFAST (UPI)—British troops Saturday reopened the main Belfast-to-Londonderry highway after bomb disposal experts determined a stolen car blocking it was not booby-trapped, the army said.

The highway had been closed throughout the night because the car blocked the Glenshane Pass in the Sperrin mountains.

Disposal experts waited until dawn before approaching the vehicle for fear it contained explosives, a British army spokesman said. Traffic was forced onto secondary roads until the car was pronounced clean of any bomb and towed away.

In southern County Down, close to the Irish Republic border, explosives experts burned out a car containing two bags of explosives, which had been abandoned on a road between Rostrevor and Warrenpoint, the spokesman said.

Security forces kept close guard on Roman Catholic churches and schools following warnings Friday by the Protestant extremist Ulster Freedom Fighters (UFF) it planned attacks on such targets.

In telephone calls to Belfast newspapers the UFF, which has claimed responsibility for assassinating several Catholics, warned Protestants to keep clear of Catholic-owned premises.

It said its men carried out a grenade attack on a Catholic-owned pub near Banbridge, County Down, Thursday night in which six persons were injured.

More than 60 telephoned bomb warnings purporting to come from the UFF caused panic in Belfast during the Friday evening rush hour, police said. Thousands of shoppers and workers fled in terror from streets where callers said bombs had been planted. Only one bomb was found and it was defused.

The callers said the bombs were in protest against the Protestant-Catholic political talks to form a new Northern Ireland executive. The talks began Friday.

Four years of strife among Northern Ireland's majority Protestants, minority Catholics and security forces have claimed 890 lives.

Allies seek compromise to bypass Nixon summit

LONDON (UPI)—The allies, warming slowly to the idea of a European visit by President Nixon, have come up with a compromise to bypass the American-sought summit meeting between the President and European leaders, authoritative diplomats said Saturday.

Nixon, who plans to visit Europe in the coming months, intended to meet with the European leaders at a joint summit to endorse a set of principles for a revitalized transatlantic relationship. The plan was received with little enthusiasm in France, set on a go-it-alone course, opposed it outright and continues to reject an inter-allied summit with Nixon.

A compromise is now being worked out by Europeans which will require a set of summit and semi-summit meetings with the President with France taking a back seat.

The projected line-up would be as follows, according to the diplomats:

—Nixon would meet with the 15 leaders of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) in Brussels to endorse a declaration setting out new principles for an updated defense alignment. The participants would include British Prime Minister Edward Heath, West German Chancellor Willy Brandt and Premier Pierre Messmer for France, instead of President Georges Pompidou.

—Nixon would then meet separately with representatives of the nine European Community member nations, also in Brussels. The Common Market countries might be represented merely by their foreign ministers, with France objecting to a summit while the European Community is groping for a proper "European personality."

This semi-summit would endorse a declaration on the future relationship between Europe and the United States. France wants this to be endorsed by the Community's individual members rather than by the Community as an entity, the sources said.

—Finally, Nixon would visit individual European capitals, including London, Bonn, Rome, possibly The Hague and Paris. In Paris he would meet with Pompidou in a strictly bilateral framework, the sources said.

Chile executes 16

SANTIAGO (UPI)—Government firing squads Saturday executed 16 men accused of terrorist attacks against the military junta, raising the number of executions to 38 since the overthrow of Marxist President Allende Sept. 11.

U.S. Embassy, meanwhile, announced an American student—the first to die since the coup—was shot to death after an arrest by the military.

Some of the executions have resulted from court martial sentences. Others have been carried out on the spot by police and military patrols acting on orders from the military junta that ousted Allende to punish armed opposition with summary execution.

U.S. Embassy officials postponed release of an autopsy report on the body of Frank Teruggi, 23, a student from Des Moines, Ill., shot to death in mysterious circumstances after being arrested Sept. 20 and taken to the improvised prison camp at the national stadium.

An embassy press spokesman said the autopsy report from the Santiago morgue was apparently in the hands of Ambassador Nathaniel Davis and was expected to be given to Consul Fred Purdy for release Monday. Teruggi's body was delivered to the morgue Sept. 22. He was not identified until Thursday.

Plans were announced for rebuilding the Casa de la Moneda, the presidential palace wrecked by ground and aerial attack Sept. 11. Work is already under way on restoring the shell-marked exterior walls.

Air Force Col. Guillermo Navarro, undersecretary of public works, said the plans call for preserving the historical nature of the palace, while carrying out a general refurbishment and reorganization of the executive offices housed there.

Of the latest executions announced by authorities, 11 took place Thursday night in Valdivia, about 400 miles south of Santiago. A court martial had sentenced them to death after they allegedly attacked a police headquarters Sept. 12 as part of a heavily-armed paramilitary outfit.

Five other men were killed in two separate cases when they allegedly tried to grab weapons from soldiers.

At Arica, on the Chile-Peru border, Luis Rojas Valenzuela, described by military authorities as "an extremist labor leader," was shot to death by an army patrol that went to his home.

Reds hold roads to Phnom Penh

PHNOM PENH (UPI)—Communist troops maintained their hold on all highways leading into Phnom Penh Saturday, but commanders said the Communists may be attempting to encircle the provincial capital of Sala Lekpram, 27 miles north on Highway 5.

"The situation is critical; if they do not—push reinforcements, Sala Lekpram will fall in a matter of days," said Col. Hang Yiv, governor of Kompong Tralach Province.

Field commanders said Saturday it appeared the Communists were trying to cut Highway 5, the "rice road," over which much of Phnom Penh's food arrives from Battambang, a half mile from Sala Lekpram. Such a move would isolate the provincial capital from Phnom Penh and tighten the rebel hold on the highway.

Communists poured mortar and automatic rifle fire into the east side of Sala Lekpram for three hours Saturday morning, wounding 11 government soldiers in the area where government artillery pieces are dug in, field reports said.

In South Vietnam, a force of 10,000 government troops, backed by warplanes and tanks, have made only sporadic contact with the Communists in their drive to recapture a battalion-sized base in the Central highlands. Heavy Communist artillery harassed the South Vietnamese, military sources said.

Jews jailed

MOSCOW (UPI)—Four of the five Jews who demonstrated outside the Interior Ministry Friday have been sentenced to 15 days in prison for "potty nationalism," Jewish sources said Saturday.

Two UPI correspondents, Christopher Ogden and Gordon F. Joseloff, were assaulted by police while covering the demonstration and detained briefly.

The Jewish sources said the fifth demonstrator was let off with a small fine.

The demonstrators, all of whom had been denied visas to Israel, were arrested before they could unfurl their protest signs.

Good weekend to stay cozy inside

Twin Falls, Northside, Burley-Rupert area: Colder with rain this morning changing to showers this afternoon and evening. Decreasing shower activity Monday. Snow showers are expected today in the mountains. Gusty winds tonight mid 30s with Monday in low 50s. Probability of rain 60 per cent today, 40 per cent tonight and Monday. Cunas Prairie, Halley, lower Wood River valley: Periods of rain, with snow in the mountains today, changing to scattered showers tonight and Monday. Snow levels will lower to near 5,000 feet late today. Windy at times. Highs today near 50 and Monday 45 to 50. Lows tonight in the 20s. Probability of precipitation 60 per cent today and tonight, 40 per cent Monday.

Synopsis: A large cold upper low pressure system settled into the Pacific northwest Saturday evening, causing rain, snow in the mountains and gusty winds in many areas. Heavy snow is expected in portions of the Cascade mountains. In Idaho some light rain and local gusty winds already have been observed, but full front of the storm will be felt today in the form of increased rain and with the snow level lowering to 4,000 in northern Idaho and 5,000 in southern Idaho. Local strong gusty winds are expected through today. Hunters are advised to prepare for snow in the mountains Sunday. Colder afternoon temperatures in the 50s are expected in the lower valleys today, contrasting to the 60 to mid 70s on Saturday. The cold weather should last into the first part of the week.

Futures trading due study

(U) Washington Star-News
WASHINGTON — The House Agriculture Committee will soon hold hearings on a broad range of proposals to tighten government regulations on the business of trading in commodity futures contracts. The hearings, which will begin on Oct. 16, will focus on ways to strengthen the role of the Department of Agriculture's Commodity Exchange Authority which is supposed to regulate trading in futures contracts at various commodity exchanges throughout the nation. Among the proposals championed by H. R. Price, D-Tex., said the committee will consider is a legislative change that would require the CEA from Agriculture and set it up as an expanded, independent, regulatory agency similar to the securities and exchange commission, which regulates the stock market. The committee will also consider ways to dampen extraordinary speculative activity by giving the government the power to set margins and to establish multiple delivery points that would stop speculators from gambling on transportation obstacles that sometimes makes delivery of commodities to cities difficult. One proposal would ban foreign governments from trading in United States futures markets. According to sources close to the committee one of the most immediate reasons for the committee's interest in futures are recent wild fluctuations in the price of cotton futures at the New York Cotton Exchange.

Nixon administration said set to boost butter imports

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A national dairy organization says the Nixon administration is close to announcing an increase in import quotas for butter. The National Milk Producers Federation quotes a "reliable source" on Capitol Hill as saying the Cost of Living Council is pushing for the increase in order to bring down the retail price of the product. Butter is presently selling for over $1 per pound. In a letter Thursday to council director John Dunlop, federation secretary Patrick Healy said such action "at this time is totally unwarranted." He said higher prices have led to a drop in sales over the last three weeks of 30 per cent. The decrease in sales, coupled with expected jump in production during coming months, should be sufficient to lower prices, Healy said. He noted further that increased milk production is resulting in larger stockpiles of nonfat dry milk. He said "knowledgeable people in the trade" are already predicting that butter and nonfat dry milk production will soon exceed commercial market requirements. "Any increase in import quotas," he wrote, "would merely serve to add to the stocks of unneeded products and result in making it necessary for the Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC) to purchase the excess supply."

He said it had also been "reliably reported" to the federation that even without any increase in imports, the CCC will "likely" buy more butter and nonfat dry milk before the year is over.

The Agriculture Department, which administers the quota system, would neither confirm nor deny a possible expansion is being studied. Should Nixon take the action, he would be required to do so by proclamation. The Tariff Commission would then conduct an investigation to see whether such an increase is warranted.

Gem slaughter poundage down

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho commercial slaughter plants, totaled 24.2 million pounds of red meat production in August, 3 per cent below the production for August 1972.

The Idaho Crop and Livestock Reporting Service listed the number of cattle slaughtered down but the average liveweight slightly increased to result in a 2 per cent decrease in the total live weight.

The August total on hog kills was 38 per cent less than 1972 with the January to August total running 27 per cent below last year.

The cumulative eight month output of red meat this year was 179.2 million pounds — a record high for the period.

Commercial production of red meat nationwide in August was 14 per cent less than the 1972 and 2 per cent above the July 1973 production.

Gem youths cited

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Warren Spencer, New Plymouth, and Mike Kendall, Emmett, both 18, have been chosen to receive the 1973 Burlington Northern Future Farmers of America award. The Idaho youths will receive their awards Oct. 18 during the national FFA convention in Kansas City, Mo. They will be among 45 winners from 15 states. The two outstanding scholastic students at their high schools have been active in FFA for many years.

Children's Theatre plans family entertainment

Councilmen Joe King, left, and Francis Egbert inspect damage done by rats on basket held by Kristy Cannon.

TWIN FALLS — If you've about given up on the idea of wholesome entertainment which would appeal to the entire family, the Children's Theatre has the answer.

Their presentation of "Pied Piper" the next two Saturdays promises enjoyment for everyone from the small fry, through sophisticated teen-ager to grandmas.

In fact, Beverly Sturgill, director, has implemented the idea of entertainment for the whole family by having several families working together in producing the play, either in the cast or helping back stage.

Ages of the cast, from 6 to 60, reflect this wide spectrum, so no matter what age category one lists himself, he or she will find a person of comparable age involved in the show.

There are several high school students in the cast, including a "romantic interest" and a special feature is a "lovable" rat, the director says.

Performances are scheduled for 10 a.m., 2 p.m., and 7:30 p.m. on Oct. 13 and 20, and there will be one presentation Friday, Oct. 19, at 7:30 p.m. The 10 a.m. Oct. 20 performance is already sold out. Tickets will be available in the Twin Falls schools this week or may be obtained by calling 733-0650 or contacting Mrs. David VanLeeuwen, 1420 Fourth Ave. E.

During the past 10 years of its operation the Community Children's Theatre has donated approximately $4,000 to the schools for books and educational equipment.

But this year Mrs. Sturgill has decided to give local students a more direct benefit — a living experience in drama, she terms it.

She will conduct a pilot project at O'Henry Junior-High School and Harrison Grade school, through cooperation with District 411 to train two and possibly three groups of young people in theater arts with the sole aim of becoming a performing troupe.

They will then perform several times during the year for school children in the area, trying different styles and types of theater. Most of the performances will be done in the round and students trained in mime, voice, characterization and improvisation.

Quartet submerges ego

by LORAYNESMITH
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The individual's ego has to be subordinated in a quartet, according to the violist of the Philadelphia String Quartet, whose members shared their expert musical talent with an appreciative audience Thursday night at the Fine Arts auditorium.

Alvin Light, whose musical credentials place him, along with his colleagues, at the top in the serious music concert field, said during an intermission interview in a concert sponsored by the Magic Valley Symphony Orchestra and the Commission on the Arts and Humanities, that the four members "thrust it out" when it comes to individual differences.

"Sure we fight," the tall, personable Light laughed. "We fight like hell — over everything — what music we will play, how we'll travel and what time we give to what causes."

Apparently the thrashing out process works for these extremely able musicians, for they have been together the past 14 years, the longest of any such quartet in the country, he said.

When asked if the lone female member, Veda Reynolds, first violinist, acted in a referee capacity, the violist replied, "No, nothing that traditional."

He indicated members do respect the individuals' view, and if three of them would decide to perform for a certain benefit for a cause which the fourth did not believe in, they would simply as a trio. But in most cases the individual goes along with the majority.

Starting their Twin Falls concert with quartet numbers of Haydn, termed the father of the string quartet, the group charmed as well as educated listeners with representative repertoire of classical, romantic as well as modern periods.

In addition to selections by Beethoven, whose 16 string quartets entitle him to be termed one of the most prolific composers in this field, as well as other musical forms, the Philadelphia quartet members presented a short number by Webern, from early 20th century composition and artistically re-created primitive sounds and basic rhythms of South America in a number by Argentinian leading composer, Ginastera. The quartet has introduced some of this contemporary composer's works in concert in the East, Light told the audience during his informal commentary between numbers.

The last half of the concert was devoted to Mendelssohn's "Quartet in E flat, Opus 12," a charming example of the Romantic period music at its best, with delicate and graceful passages supported by lyrical harmony.

The quartet members feel there is a growing appreciation for chamber music, which traditionally has been considered more the province of the socially elite than the common man.

Since they are supported by the University of Washington, Seattle, for their basic income, and also have time to conceive abroad during the summer, the quartet members do not have to depend upon mass popularity for their bread and butter.

This frees them the age-old problem artists always have faced, of tailoring their art to the lowest common denominator — as Light described it.

The second violinist, Irwin Eisenberg, said the quartet has "built up an audience" in the Seattle area and while they obviously cannot compete with the audience turnout for Johnny Cash of the "mass taste," both children and adults respond when classical music is "presented right."

Both men indicated they are careful to do this in their performances in schools. Part of their contract with the University of Washington "is that they present concerts and workshops in schools in the several Western states."

This current tour, partially subsidized by the Idaho Commission on the Arts and Humanities in Idaho, is an example of the value of local financial forces with state cultural agencies to bring chamber music once heard only in big city concert halls to the town and country areas of the West.

The quartet also played in Caldwell and Boise this week on their Idaho trip. They traveled by all different ways, mostly by air and sometimes car. In Argentina they utilized a DC-3 plane, Light said. This trip they flew to Boise, then came here via car.

But whether they play in Belgium, Italy, New York, or Twin Falls, before audiences large or small, these four excellent string players bring to their audience not only their skill in technique and brilliance in style, but perhaps the most appreciated touch, warmth and friendliness in even the most casual conversation, dispelling that myth that top artists are somehow different from the rest of us "ordinary" mortals.

Their ability, enjoyment of performance and the response of the several hundred-member audience seem to assure that chamber music, once confined to the drawing rooms of the rich, has reached an enduring niche in our modern American culture.

Soloists named

'Elijah' soloists selected

TWIN FALLS — Soloists for the Nov. 27 Magic Valley Choral production of "Elijah" have been named by the chorale.

The soloists are Helen Allen and Joan Carr, sopranos; Lanis Kingsford, alto; Jack Van Burne, tenor, and Roger Vincent, Filler, bass.

Anticipating the chorale in performance of the opera will be the Magic Valley Symphony.

The youth role calling for a boy or girl soprano is still open and will be filled by open audition. Those interested in the role may contact Mrs. James Keefe, Kimberly, for information.

Singers wanting to participate are still welcome. Rehearsals are conducted at 9 p.m. each Thursday at the Presbyterian Church.

Women to attend meet

TWIN FALLS — Mrs. Frank DeLuca, Mrs. Louis Thorson and Mrs. David Mead, all Twin Falls, are expected to attend an executive board meeting of the Idaho Federation of Music Clubs in Idaho Falls Monday.

The executive meeting will be followed by a general meeting Tuesday.

Clifford Mullikin, Burley, is the other area member of the executive board.

Mark Niewirth, Twin Falls, who won the Stillman Kelly Scholarship from the NFMCI, is the most recent Idaho student to win such an award.

'First Oscar'— promotion or put-on?

By DAVID HORSMAN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — "The First American Museum of Theatrical Arts and Sciences: The World's Largest Collection of Benevolent Strangeness and Theatrical Memorabilia with Wax Illustrations of the Famous and Infamous of the Entertainment World."

That's quite a moniker for one business, especially when the business is owned and operated by one man.

Richard W. Eastman is the man. Promoting and producing nostalgia is his business.

Eastman is in Twin Falls to drum up business. A San Francisco native, he was a "concerned" party in an incident that occurred here last summer.

An associate of Eastman's, John Helton, Filer, misplaced a replica of the first Oscar (presented to producer Louis B. Mayer) in 1927 in the Twin Falls Bus Depot. The replica was later found.

Eastman owns what he claims is the original Oscar. He came to Twin Falls "to prove" that he owns it, — and maybe lay a little nostalgia on area residents.

He brought along the first "made" for TV film — "Emperor Norton I" — and other celluloid classics, enough for a three hour film show. The TV film was made in 1939 for the San Francisco World Fair.

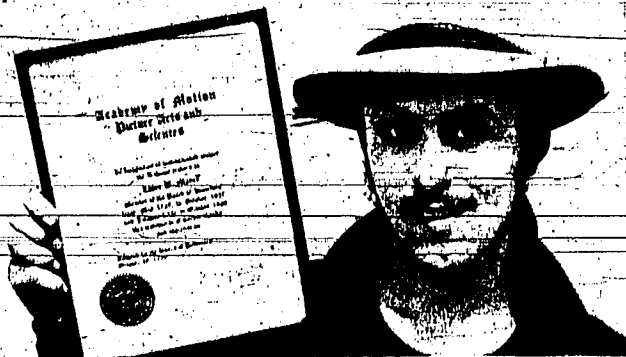

Eastman plans to offer his services to the local United Fund campaign for a benefit performance.

After that?

"We are here to bring nostalgia back to the area," Eastman said, "including old time movies, variety shows and vaudeville."

"We are interested in local talent."

Spread on the greasepaint, dust off the limelight — here comes the nostalgia review

Richard Eastman displays Oscar

Hailey girl said semifinalist

HAILEY — Cathy Butterfield, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Butterfield, Ketchum, has been named a semifinalist in the 1974 National Merit Scholarship program.

As one of 60 Idaho semifinalists she can compete for more than 3,000 merit scholarships. She must qualify as a finalist to advance in the competition for the scholarships.

She is active in the school band, participated in track and cross country teams, belongs to the Intermountain Ski Association, holds a senior A ski rating and has raced in the Senior National Championships and the Can-Am cup races in Colorado and Utah.

Miss Butterfield plans to attend Middlebury College in Vermont.

The brook trout is a cross between the male mackinaw trout and the female brook trout.

Fiddlers entertain

TWIN FALLS — Members of the Idaho Old Time Fiddlers will provide entertainment at an open house from 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday at the Senior Citizen's Center.

The open house will celebrate the first anniversary of the center which is located at 421 Second Ave. W. Martha Brown will be hostess for the event.

Soldier Mountain Ski Patrol member honored

FAIRFIELD — Thomas Spackman, Fairfield, member of the Soldier Mountain Ski Patrol, has been honored as a "National Ski Patroler."

Richard Reininger, Pacific northwest division chairman of the National Ski Patrol System, Inc., announced the honor today. He said Spackman has been active in the patrol at Soldier Mountain since 1961 and is a highly qualified ski mountaineer, having participated in several rescues.

He served as patrol director for two years and has been first aid chief and chairman of the bylaws committee.

The "National Patroler" award is given after extraordinary and continuous personal contribution over a period of years. Reininger said, and recognizes excellence in leadership, first aid, skiing and patrol procedures. The award requires training in avalanche and winter mountaineering rescue procedures.

There are 27,000 National Ski Patrol members and during the 35 year history of the organization less than 5,000 such citations have been given.

Family theatre planned

Objective of the pilot project, Sturgill says, is not to turn out theater majors but to develop creativity in mind and body, secure expressive personality and supply training which will enable the individual to more clearly express himself in whatever he might decide to do in life, and give those who are interested in majoring in drama, a solid foundation in theater arts.

Only the upper grades will be trained on the elementary school level. The children will be involved in Reader's Theatre and creative drama. A workshop is planned with the teachers to show them how drama can be integrated into the other subjects as means of learning, Mrs. Sturgill said.

The major emphasis this first year will be on the junior high level and the grade school program will be very experimental, the director says, until a definite workable program can be established.

The Children's Theatre has received federal funding for the project which, it is estimated, will benefit 45 junior high, 100 elementary students and an audience estimated at 4,000 persons.

YOUNG CYCLISTS, Brett Hamilton, left, and Andy Barber, ages 7 and 9, register for the Saturday Bike-A-Thon for the American Cancer Society. Mrs. Richard Barber, chairman, talks with the participants about the fund raising event.

Bicyclists will ride for American Cancer Society

TWIN FALLS — Bicyclists of all ages will be riding Saturday in behalf of the American Cancer Society.

The Twin Falls area Bike-A-Thon is scheduled to begin at 9 a.m. at Cascade Park on Stadium Boulevard and continue to Shoshone Falls.

Leading the procession of several hundred bike riders will be J. J. Alexander, area newsman, who will be helping the Cancer Society promote its cause through the special fund event.

The ride will end at 1 p.m. back at Cascade Park after a round trip to Shoshone Falls Park. "The Partridge Family" television program will be promoting the Bike-A-Thon on a national basis.

At the conclusion of the ride participants will be served free hot dogs, soft drinks and potato chips.

Riders are asked to contact their own sponsors and to ride at a fee of so much per mile. Persons wishing to sponsor riding may call in their pledges before and during the 10-mile ride to KMYV-TV station. Merchants have donated prizes for those raising the most money for the American Cancer Society. The awards include a 10-speed bike donated by Newton's Sporting Goods and a 10-speed bike from Gibson's Discount Center. The bicycles will go to the top boy and top girl under 18 years of age. For the oldest adult man and woman participating, prizes of a dinner for two at the Black White Inn and the Blue Quail Restaurant will be awarded.

The largest immediate family participating receives a five gallon aquarium from the Lynwood Aquarium and Pet Supply.

Prizes will be on display at the Idaho Department Store through Friday and at Cascade Park during the day of the ride. Entries for the Bike-A-Thon may be obtained from participating merchants or through the schools.

Money collected from sponsors should be given to the schools or Mickey Barber, 975 Del Mar Drive, 734-2806.

A team of medics will be on the route to assist those who have difficulty or should suffer an injury. Deputies from the Twin Falls sheriff's office will direct traffic and the Amateur Radio Club of Magic Valley will provide radio communication.

All participants will receive certificates of appreciation and Bike-A-Thon buttons.

On Oct. 20 a similar event is being planned in Buhl for the West End Twin Falls County residents. In the event of rain the Twin Falls ride will be postponed to Oct. 20.

DEAR ABBY: My lady friend is a kissing fool. Hugging and kissing is her idea of the utmost in ecstasy, and she can't seem to get enough of it.

Last night we sat on her sofa kissing from midnight until 2 a.m., and I hardly managed to get my own lips together once in those two hours. If my nose had been stopped up, I would have suffocated. All this time she was glued to my face, wearing me out.

I tried to explain that a normal man enjoys about five minutes of kissing, but I never got to finish the sentence.

It's not as if we are a pair of starry-eyed teen-agers, either. We are up in years.

Is there such a thing as a lip fetish? If so, this lady has a serious case. She doesn't need a man. Give her a pair of rubber lips nailed to a post and she would be in business.

Do you think she needs psychiatric help to cool her head? Or should I seek some myself for continuing to put up with her?

Big E award given

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Exchange Club has been awarded the National Exchange Club's 1973 Big E award for excellence.

The award is presented annually to Exchange Clubs meeting requirements in efficiency, expansion and education. There are more than 1200 Exchange Clubs nationally and 382 of those qualified for the award this year.

Winning clubs participated in the National Exchange Club's Freedom Shrine and National Crime Prevention Week programs and at least two other community service projects.

Bill Miller, past president, and Ed Robertson, president of the club were presented the award by Francis Egbert, representing the National organization.

There are three new members of the organization. They are Mike Robertson, Bill Seck and Ernie Davis.

Too much kissing

DEAR DONE: If you want to cool her down, marry her.

DEAR ABBY: Have you ever heard of giving an unwed mother a baby shower? The girl is only 15, and the baby's father is 16. She is five months along, and her girl friends are giving her a shower. Maybe by the time the baby is born she will be married to the baby's father, but right now his folks have refused to sign, and he can't get married without their signatures, as he is under age.

I bought a gift with money I saved up from baby-sitting. My mother says I can go if I want to, but it would be like saying I saw nothing wrong with what this girl did. Abby, I think she did a wrong thing, but she is my friend and I can't turn my back on her now.

Some of the girls' mothers told their daughters they should send their gifts, but not go. How do you feel about this?

ALSO 15

DEAR ALSO: Being loyal to a friend doesn't necessarily imply approval of everything that friend does. Your peer group is showing more charity and compassion for an unmarried expectant mother than earlier generations would have shown, which I think is to your credit.

DEAR ABBY: For the last six months my husband faithfully has gotten up at 1 a.m. every Saturday morning to go Eastern Shore fishing.

I never paid much attention to it until recently when I noticed that when he came home he was wearing his best shoes, best pants, and brand new shirt.

When I asked him about it, he said he had to look decent in case he wanted to stop in a restaurant for coffee and a sandwich. Abby, I would like your reaction to his explanation.

SUSPICIOUS

DEAR SUSPICIOUS: His story sounds fishy to me. Fishing clothes are considered "decent" in fishing territory. But on the other hand, if he had something to hide, he could easily change back into his fishing clothes before returning home. [P.S. How much fish does he bring home? If it's usually not much of a catch, you may catch him.]

MR. AND MRS. R.C. TRAUTWEIN

Couple exchanges nuptial promises

TWIN FALLS — Judith Ann Basel and Robert Charles Trautwein were married in Sept. 22 rites at St. James Lutheran Church, Portland, Ore.

Pastor Joe E. Smith conducted the ceremony. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Richard B. Burns, Portland, and Edgar Basel, Tulsa, Okla. The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Fred Trautwein, Twin Falls.

The bride wore a gown of ivory satin with modified slender sleeves. The dress was trimmed with a panel of re-embroidered alençon lace on the front of the bodice and skirt. Soft pleats in the skirt of the dress set off the front panel. Her matching chapel-length mantilla was held by a lace pillbox headpiece. She carried a bouquet of rust and nectarine dahlias and pompon chrysanthemums with accents of purple statice.

Judith Ann Roberts, Portland, was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Dunne Darnell, Medford, Ore.; Judith Hawkins, Portland, and Lianne Lee, Eugene. James Robinson Jr. was best man. Ushers were Lyle Pool, Earl Clark and Robert Hitchcock.

The couple was honored at a champagne and wedding cake reception in the Cambridge Room of the Benson Hotel after the wedding ceremony.

After a wedding trip to San Francisco, Calif., the couple resides at 526 N. W. 21st, Portland, Ore. The bride is an assistant buyer of gifts, candles and flowers at Meier and Frank, Portland, and the bridegroom is librarian at the Portland Public Library.

Engineer James Patrick explains dam design

Dam replacement urged

Mrs. Butterfield, in written and oral testimony, said tribal officials were concerned that measures will not be taken to prevent erosion. She said the bill authorizing the dam should specify that the reservoir level not be raised.

Another hint of controversy was raised by American Falls attorney Ben Cavness, who said American Falls Bridge Committee will not accept any plan which calls for passing fish through power plant turbines. However, he said, the committee will accept any device designed to prevent that and protect the trout fishery below the dam.

Ways to protect the trout fishery are being studied, he said. Most effective witness on effects of limiting the reservoir to two thirds of its capacity was Wendell Johnson, Richfield, rancher and a director of American Falls Reservoir District No. 2.

Johnson said his district purchased 80,000 acre feet of water at a cost of $40,000 to finish the 1973 irrigation season. He said there was 80 per cent delivery in two months and the season was cut short by 15 days. "This was in a year when we had high carryover on the Snake River," he said.

Johnson said the outlook for 1974 is "bleak." Without above average snowfall and a wet spring, farmers in the Richfield area face a "very limited water supply."

"We can probably survive one or two short water years with a lot of belt tightening but any more than that will see severe financial hardships," he said.

Thomas G. Nelson, Twin Falls, attorney for the American Falls Reservoir district, said spaceholders have spent "well over $200,000" for preliminary work on the dam replacement although Congressional authorization is pending.

Presently, Nelson said, Idaho Power has filed application for a license for a new power plant; the highway design is ready for final review; bonding counsel has been retained, and legislation has been prepared for the Idaho Legislature changing state laws to allow irrigation districts to deal with fisheries and similar matters involved in major dam construction.

Nelson said an amendment incorporated into the bill passed by the Senate earlier this year allowing creation of a three-member engineering arbitration board was "a last ditch approach" to avoid disputes between the district and the Department of the Interior stalling the project.

Subcommittee members quizzed Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, on that amendment he termed it a "safety hatch" in case of disagreements causing delays.

Church and Sen. James A. McClure, R-Idaho, both backed the House bills. McClure said a "bleak" water outlook for 1974 emphasized the need for rebuilding the dam. Both Rep. Orval Hansen and Rep. Steve Symms, both Republicans, backed the bill. Hansen said the power plant could help ease the energy shortage.

Sen. John M. Barker, R-Idaho, reservoir district president, said 96 per cent of the spaceholders are in accord with the proposal put forth by Idaho Power. He said the state legislature is ready to receive necessary legislation clearing the way for bond elections, anticipated sometime early in 1974.

Youth hear talk by Miss Idaho

KETCHUM — Community pride begins with self pride, Sharon Davis, Miss Idaho, told state youth Friday evening in Ketchum.

Miss Davis addressed the annual two-day Idaho 4-H Community Pride Conference which concluded Saturday. Self pride may begin with a small spark, Miss Davis said, or may take years to accomplish. She stressed the importance of God as a good resource to turn to in seeking self pride.

Miss Idaho encouraged the youth — which were being honored for their contributions through community projects — not to stop, but to move on toward more accomplishments.

The Community Pride program is a 4-H activity of the University of Idaho, Cooperative Extension Service, and is sponsored jointly with Standard Oil Co.

The conference was designed to encourage young citizens to participate in community betterment projects and to stress an active role in community planning and growth.

Guns stolen

TWIN FALLS — Guns were reported stolen Saturday by two Twin Falls residents.

James Younger, 520 Third Avenue E., told officers someone entered his home and took a .22 caliber revolver from a dresser drawer. He estimated the value of the gun at $30.

Hurry — Martin, 740 Morningside St., reported someone entered a basement apartment at his address and took a Remington rifle and scope valued at $160.

Riders shame Diamond Jack

By ANN DAILY
Times-News writer

JACKPOT, Nev. — Three Arabian horses and their California riders crossed the finish line of the first annual Diamondfield Jack endurance ride here Saturday afternoon in a time that would have put Diamondfield to shame.

The 54 mile ride from Rock Creek up to Deadline Ridge and into Nevada was accomplished in three hours and 16 minutes. Diamondfield Jack, accused of murdering two sheepherders during a ride over the same route in 1896, languished in jail for six years while attorneys and witnesses debated the possibility of such a ride in five hours. However, Diamondfield was supposed to have done it in February with part of the trail under snow.

First place winner in the endurance ride was Dave Wasden, Sunland, Calif., riding an experienced endurance ride winner, Hawk, a 7-year-old Arabian. Coming in just behind him was Jerry Barstad, on Rocky, a 5-year-old Arabian and in third place was Norman Barstad, on LaNessa, a nine-year-old Arabian. Both are from Los Angeles.

In fourth place was Terry Hecker, Sacramento, Calif., on Allzan, another Arabian grade horse while Kim Pugh, 13, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hoyt Pugh, Richfield, took the only honors for a Magic Valley rider and placed eighth in over all competition and was the first youth rider to complete the 54 miles.

Appaloosa breeders who planned the ride and conducted it, had to doff their hats to the Arabian breeders as few Appaloosas placed among the finalists.

Although most of the riders used western saddles, some English and McClenahan saddles were in evidence on the 20 official entries in the event.

Prizes were claimed by the winners from the sponsors, Cactus Pote, Horse Shu Club and Club 93 of Jackpot at the concluding ceremonies here. Riders were entered from California, Oregon, Washington, Utah, Colorado, Arizona, Nevada and Idaho. Veterinarians assisting in inspecting the horses included Dr. Bruce Bascomb, Elko, Nev.; Dr. Randy Bean, Twin Falls; Dr. Bob Monroe, Twin Falls; and Dr. Henry Cook, Sacramento.

Robert Harney, Twin Falls, and L. W. (Bill) Moore, Hansen, who chairmanned the event, said they hope to continue the race annually with a bigger event in 1974.

Dual crossings asked at AF

By DALE STEWART
Times-News Writer

BURLEY — Dual crossings of the Snake River are planned in conjunction with a new American Falls Dam.

Testimony presented Saturday during field hearings on legislation authorizing the new dam included details of the replacement dam and the two highway crossings.

James G. Patrick, engineer for Bechtel, Inc., told the House subcommittee conducting the hearing that detail design of the dam incorporating a "modern two-lane highway" is in progress and that a review board of three engineers retained by the American Falls Reservoir District has said the proposal would provide "a safe and economical dam."

A letter from the Idaho Department of Highways, included among testimony submitted by Gov. Cecil D. Andrus, outlined a two point state proposal:

Construction of a two-lane crossing downstream from the existing dam. Funds for it would be shared 50-50 by the state and reservoir spaceholders. Approach roads would be "benched" into the earthen embankment of the proposed dam.

"A second two-lane crossing atop the new dam when it is built.

On completion, the second crossing would carry westbound traffic only and the first would revert to one-way crossing of eastbound traffic after handling two-way travel during construction of the dam.

Thomas G. Nelson, Twin Falls, reservoir district attorney, said in written testimony about $900,000 in federal bridge funds is available for the crossing. An amendment to a bill previously passed by the U. S. Senate authorizing private construction of the new dam is needed to make it clear the crossing and dam project are within the meaning of a federal law governing bridges on federal dams. He submitted a draft of that amendment.

"Patrick told the House subcommittee conducting the hearings the replacement dam plan includes:

— Virtually no modification of the 1,000 foot left side earthen embankment.

— Using 2,375 feet of existing concrete dam as a water barrier, strengthening it with gravel and sand upstream and downstream.

— A 70 foot long earth and rock fill dam tying the existing structure to a new concrete dam.

— A new concrete gravity dam 577 feet long containing water release sluices, spillway and penstocks.

— A new earth and rock fill embankment 760 feet long on the right abutment.

A three unit, 90 megawatt power house would be located 280 feet downstream from the new dam. It would use penstocks provided in the new dam.

Patrick estimated cost of the new dam at $20.6 million, based on 1973 costs and with provisions for a two-lane highway. He said that does not include allowance for cost escalation, and other recreation, fish, wildlife, or landowner costs. Contingency and engineering cost provisions are included, he said.

The state highway department's proposal called for matching equally any federal funds available by the state and spaceholders.

That letter also said the design of the first phase of the bridge replacement is nearly complete. It includes piers and coffer dam. That phase would begin in late autumn when water flow is at a minimum.

Counter claim filed at Burley

BURLEY — Vance and Jean Matthews of Thriftway Farms, Burley, filed a counter claim against Union Seed Co., Burley, asking $50,000 compensation for "libelous actions."

Union Seed filed suit against the two Matthews Sept. 27 asking about $54,313 in payment for about 22,000 bushels of wheat that had been contracted in February for August delivery at $2.45, according to the suit.

The counterclaim charges that the contract provided only "for the price of the wheat should it be delivered in August."

Allegedly Matthews, asked Charles Hendricks, Union Seed official, what price would be paid for the wheat if it were not delivered in August and Hendricks allegedly said, "you will have to take the market price."

"The suit claims that Hendricks breached the contract because he failed to pay the market price of $4.50 for about 5,227 bushels of wheat delivered in September.

According to the counterclaim, Hendricks met with Matthews in the field about July 18 and told Matthews it would be alright if the wheat were not harvested in August.

The counterclaim charges that oral agreements made with Hendricks did not include the August delivery date but that Hendricks insisted on including it in the written contract knowing that Matthews was "under duress to sign the contract in order to procure financing for the wheat farm operation."

Matthews claimed in the suit that he stopped delivering wheat because Union Seed would not pay the market price for the September wheat.

The counterclaim asks that the contract be terminated and asks payment for the 5,227 bushels of wheat at $4.50 per bushel instead of the $2.45 paid earlier on delivery.

The counterclaim further asks $50,000 compensation for "libelous allegations" which were printed in the news media concerning the original suit and which caused "irreparable harm" to Matthews' reputation.

Zoning proposal gets new life

He said he thought there would be "a consensus" among the other commissioners on that course of action.

Although the zoning commissioners meet Thursday night, Channey did not say when the county commissioners would meet with them.

Koutnik also acknowledged the ordinance that has caused the most controversy, the one covering zoning, had some technical problems that would require amendment before it could become fully enforceable.

The three ordinances are the result of a study commissioned by the county. Prof. Ross Fasolino of Idaho State University drafted the basic plans, which were then reviewed by the zoning commission.

After they had finished their deliberations, the zoning commissioners ordered the proposals published as legal notices prior to a public hearing.

At the hearing, the weight of public testimony induced the zoners to insert the provision calling for an agricultural rim setback. They then sent the proposed ordinances to the county commission for final action.

For the county commissioners on advice of their attorney, Robert Alexander, said such an insertion was impossible because of legal publication regulations.

Conducting their own public hearing last week, the commissioners heard from a number of citizens arguing for and against the setback, even though they had rules beforehand they did not have the authority to consider such a plan.

Several persons speaking at the public hearing also said a delay in the enactment of the proposals would permit more time to iron out some of the problems that remain.

Twin Falls dogs have own salon

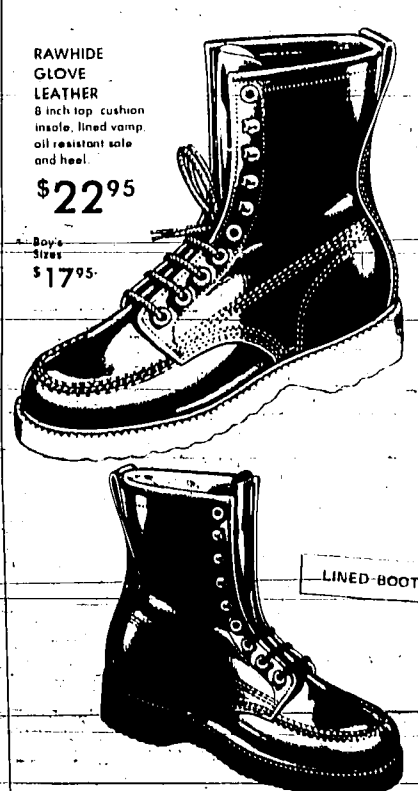

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls area dog owners can now take their pets to Sherrie Spald for clips, trims, dyeing and professional pattern cuts.

Mrs. Spald last month opened Sherrie's Poodle Puff Salon at 352 Main Ave. South. While Mrs. Spald grooms and trims all breeds of dog, poodles remain her specialty. Except for pattern cutting, Mrs. Spald uses hand scissors in trimming dogs.

"Poodles I like to specialize in," Mrs. Spald said. "I guess it's because there's so much hair. You can mold it into so many different designs—and cuts. With schnauzers and other dogs it's more like straight work."

Prior to coming to Twin Falls with her husband six months ago, Mrs. Spald operated a poodle parlor for eight years in Elko, Nev. In Elko she found the demand for poodle trimming unusually heavy with an emphasis on night work. When she moved to Twin Falls,

Financial statements eyed by accounting profession

(c) New York Times Service
NEW YORK — The accounting profession, after two and a half years of self-examination, published Wednesday a 71-page document designed to tell what financial statements — balance sheets, earnings reports and the like — are supposed to disclose.

A nine-man study group headed by Robert M. Trueblood, a Chicago accountant, wrestled for 30 months with the assignment, and its report lists 11 basic objectives that are expected to form a sort of philosophical framework for setting specific, detailed accounting standards and rules.

The chief aim of financial statements, the Trueblood committee's report recommended, is "to provide information useful for making economic decisions." The other 10 objectives flow logically from this source-idea.

The study group concluded that financial statements should:

1. Contain information for predicting, comparing and evaluating the earning power of enterprises.
2. Serve the needs of users who rely on such reports as their principal source of information for economic decisions.
3. Emphasize substance, not technical form.
4. Reflect the ability of an enterprise to generate cash for its owners.
5. Report both historical cost and current values that differ significantly.
6. Aid users in assessing risk.
7. Separate information that is factual from information that is interpretive.
8. Disclose assumptions and judgments that enter into preparation of the statements.
9. Group and segregate resources and obligations according to the relative uncertainty of their realization or liquidation.
10. Disclose the inherent imprecision resulting from the necessity to use assumptions and estimates in many aspects of financial reporting.

"My general feeling," John C. Burton, chief accountant at the Securities and Exchange Commission, said, "is that it's a useful document. Not a revolutionary one but a useful one."

Marshall Armstrong, chairman of the Financial Accounting Standards Board, which now sets the rules for financial reports, said the board and the Trueblood committee would meet to see how the new document would be used. "We don't want to see it gather dust," Armstrong said.

Bicycle sales pedal upward

(c) Newhouse News Service
WASHINGTON — Bicycle sales are pedaling toward record heights.

Some 15.4 million new two-wheelers will be sold this year, according to projections of the Bicycle Institute of America, a trade association. This represents an increase of 11 per cent over 1972's record-setting 13.9 million.

Last year about 55 per cent of purchases were of adult models, ones which the industry says are used by cyclists over 16. The percentage of adult sales is expected to remain the same in 1973.

Phil Burke, the institute's public affairs director, predicts a sales peak will be reached. But apparently the end is not in sight yet. The industry expects to peddle 16.9 million bicycles in 1974 and 18 million in 1975.

TF agent attends school

TWIN FALLS — James W. Hawley, CLU agent for Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., Twin Falls, attended the annual Regional Teacher Conference of the American College of Life Underwriters in San Francisco.

The school is held each year with teachers of formal southern and eastern Idaho chapters of CLU and other American College Classes throughout the country invited to attend the classes.

Those completing the classes qualify for National examinations leading to the professional CLU designation or post-graduate certificates in the field of life and health insurance.

Allison gains 263 yards as TF drills Nampa 34-6

Sophomore Mike Allison romped for 263 yards and the Twin Falls Bruins scored the first three touchdowns in the first half Friday night as they capped homecoming with a lopsided 34-6 decision over the Nampa Bulldogs.

With a crowd of about 4,000 looking on, Allison, behind sometimes devastating blocking by the Bruin offensive line, piled up 110 yards in the first quarter when the Bruins jumped ahead 14-0. With the exception of two plays, one of them a fine 73-yard burst by Nampa's Frank Needs, Twin Falls' defense stymied the weird and baffling Nampa flying T.

Allison's effort may be a Twin Falls high school record, although statistics prior to 1959 are not certain. The previous high during that time was a

Eagles win

College of Southern Idaho romped away with its own cross country meet Friday afternoon by demolishing Ricks and College of Idaho.

Steve McCalley and Gary Sievers went one-two individual for the Eagles who wound up with 20 points. Ricks had 36 and the Coyotes 68.

Greg Hoskins of Ricks was third while CSI's Monty Brothwell was fourth, Jeff Van Hoazer sixth and Tim Severa seventh.

The Eagles will meet several Utah junior colleges in Salt Lake City next week.

Meridian grinds past Spartans

RUPERT — The Meridian Warriors unleashed a surprisingly strong ground attack Friday night and rolled over the Minico Spartans 28-0.

The Warriors did as expected in the early going, taking to the air for a 6-0 lead. That came on a 21-yard strike from Jerry Parks to Mark Bevel who was standing in the end zone.

But after a couple of punt exchanges, Minico unciled a 60-yard drive that was culminated on Frank McClear's four-yard dive.

The second half was all Meridian. Bruce Anderson moved the Warriors away on a 22-yard slash off tackle and minutes later Parks

Indians end Valley win skein

SHOSHONE — The Shoshone Indians, striking on the third play of the game, handed the Valley Vikings their first loss of the season 7-0 Friday night.

The result turned the Little Five Conference into another screaming mess and made a repeat of the past two years — three teams tied for first — another possibility.

It was all told early. Mike Henth returned the opening kickoff to the 40-yard line and Mark Anderson ripped for a first down to the 50 on the next play. After an incomplete pass, Anderson shook away on a 50-yard scoring jaunt off a cross buck and Lee Williams added the extra point.

Indians win WR meet

HAILEY — The Intermountain Indian school of Brigham City placed three men in the top 10 Friday and won the annual Wood River cross country invitational.

John Hunter of Gooding State continued to pace all individuals with a new course record time of 17:04. Following him were Blah of the Indian school, Doug Larson, Twin Falls; Yassie, Indians; Tappen, Buhl; Pate, Gooding State; Miller, Twin Falls; Stewart, Buhl; Shorty, Indians, and Walter, Jerome.

The Indian school had 61 points, followed by Twin Falls at 63, Mountain Home 127, Jerome 129, Idaho Falls 136, Wood River 140, Gooding State 175, Buhl 192, Skyline 212, Minico 224, Filer 338 and Butte 271.

The Indian school won the girls meet with 50 as Wood River had 60, Mountain Home 67, Jerome 71 and Leadore 164. The Utahns also took the jayvee meet with a perfect 15 point ranking.

Wood River slips past Pilots 7-0

GLENN'S FERRY — The Wood River Wolverines battled off their backs on a couple of occasions and slipped off the upset hook when Randy Collier broke an 85-yard scoring spring in the fourth period to beat Glenn's Ferry 7-0 Friday night.

Wood River's best threat came early when it drove to the Glenn's Ferry 15 but ran out of downs.

The Pilots' biggest chance came on a play originating at the one-foot line but dying on a fumble. A pass from Steve Shrum to Shelby put the ball in that position.

The Pilots also passed their way to the Wood River 14 in the third quarter but could not muscle the ball in.

Valley made two threats in the first half and Shoshone saw two field goal attempts blocked in the third quarter. Shoshone held great field position throughout the fourth period, usually being inside the 30-yard line, but couldn't muster another scoring punch.

Both teams were hampered by more than 100 yards in penalties while Anderson ended the night with 146 yards in 15 carries.

Undeclared tips Hansen

DECILO — The undefeated Declo Hornets exploded two long scoring bombs and added another score off a pass interception to defeat the Hansen Huskies 18-6 Friday night.

Hansen took the opening kickoff and marched to a score in the first three minutes, the payoff coming on a 27-yard scoring strike from Marty Jacobs to Byron Stanger. A clip call cost the Huskies another score minutes later.

But in the second period Randy Osterhout and Robb Hiding hooked up on an 80-yard pass and run play for a 6-6 halftime deadlock.

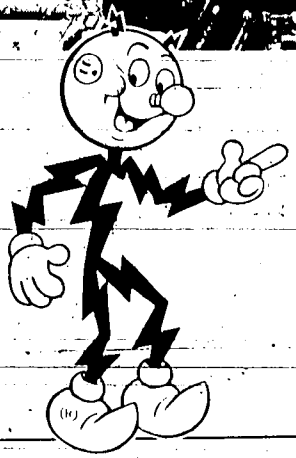

It stayed tied until nine minutes remained in the game when Ridding threw to Randy Brackenbury for 60 yards and the go-ahead points.

The Hornets threatened again late, moving to a first down at the Hansen three. They fumbled the ball away there but two plays later Hugh Ray intercepted a pass at the 35 and returned it to the Hansen two. After one running play, Brackenbury hit Osterhout for 15 yards and the final points.

We are adding another Twin Falls within our service area every year

Population numbers in the area served by Idaho Power Company are skyrocketing! As evidence of the ever-expanding rate of growth, we have added more residential meters in a one-year period than are required for the city of Twin Falls.

Out-pacing population growth is electric use per customer, especially noticeable in the large numbers migrating out from low-use brackets. During the past decade, electric use per Idaho Power customer increased by 35 percent, for a substantial lift in living standards for thousands of families.

Low rates are a factor. Increases are inevitable, but for Idaho Power users today the average cost per kilowatt hour is lower than it was ten years ago, and only 75 percent of the national average.

Providing the power generating, transmission and distribution facilities to keep pace with this accelerating growth is a constant challenge. In spite of persistent increases in construction costs and the high cost of financing, new power plants must be built. Public understanding is necessary that we may continue to supply dependable service to satisfy the electric needs of this rapidly growing area.

Colorado Staters rally past Idaho

MOSCOW, Idaho (UPI) — Jan Stubbe threw three touchdown passes as the Colorado State Rams came from behind Saturday to beat the University of Idaho, 33-30.

	CSU	Idaho
First downs	25	24
Rushes-yards	32-70	50-190
Passes	24-49-1	19-36-1
Fumbles	5-4-4	5-3-6
Fumbles-lost	0-0	6-4
Penalties-yards	4-10	9-103

Stubbe passed for two tallies of 12 and 8 yards to flanker Willie Miller and the game-winner, a 15-yarder to tight end Jim Kennedy with 3:03 left in the contest.

The Rams were outguined by the Vandals, 460 yards to 371, but recovered four of six Idaho fumbles and picked up more than 100 yards in penalties.

Vols outlast Kansas 28-27

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — Tailback Haskel Stanback scored two fourth-quarter touchdowns Saturday and Tennessee's defense, riddled by quarterback David Jaynes' brilliant passing show, halted a two-point conversion try by Jaynes to preserve a 28-27 Vol victory.

Jaynes passed for 394 yards and three touchdowns, but had to eat his promise that "We'll still be a winner after Tennessee."

Stanback scored on runs of eight and four yards to pull the eighth ranked Vols, who were down 21-7 at the half, from the brink of their first defeat.

Breaks help USC drop OSC

CORVALLIS, Ore. (UPI) — Third-ranked Southern California utilized six pass interceptions and recovery of a fumble to generate two touchdowns by Anthony Davis in a surprisingly difficult 21-7 Pacific 8 football victory over winless Oregon State Saturday.

The defending conference and national champions displayed an erratic offense on an artificial turf, slick with standing rain water. However, the Troy defense produced the breaks, including the interceptions and the recovered Beaver fair catch fumble to avoid possible embarrassment.

Davis, who had drawn some criticism from coach John McKay for "running for touchdowns instead of yards in our first three games," got more than 100 yards in 36 carries for his best day of the season.

Penn State tops Falcons

AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. (UPI) — Defensive back Tim Bradley recovered a fumble and intercepted a pass Saturday to set up scoring runs of four and eight yards by John Cappelletti and seventh-ranked Penn State came from behind for a 19-9 win over Air Force.

Cappelletti carried the ball 33 times for 181 yards, the second-best output of his career and the seventh time the 6-1, 210-pound senior has crossed the century mark rushing in 15 varsity games.

Penn State, 4-0, also scored on a 38-yard pass from Tom Shuman to Gary Hayman for its first touchdown.

Idaho jumped quickly on top on a five-yard scoring strike for quarterback Rick Seefried to split end Tim Coles and came back four minutes later on a five-yard run by Darrell Mitchell.

Colorado State countered with Stubbe's 12-yarder to Miller, then two teams traded field goals with the Rams' Herman Morales hitting a 25-yarder and Idaho's Steve Palmer counter-ing with a 26-yard boot.

Idaho scored again with 12 seconds left in the half on a reverse by flanker Kirk Dennis.

Utah stops BYU 13-7

LOGAN, Utah (UPI) — Tailback Archie Gibson rushed for 135 yards and Utah State's only touchdown in the Aggies' 13-7 win over in-state rival Brigham Young Saturday.

Utah State had little else on offense besides Gibson, but the Aggie defense picked off two interceptions and recovered one fumble to halt BYU drives.

The USU line, outweighted by BYU, penetrated with ease to stop the Cougar offense. The Aggies sacked Cougar quarterbacks three times and nailed BYU runners six times for losses.

But their finest hour came in the closing minute of the game, when they stopped a Cougar drive on the USU five-yard line as time ran out on BYU.

Irish struggle past Spartans

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (UPI) — Mike Townsend's 47-yard run with an intercepted pass took the pressure off Notre Dame Saturday and enabled the hard-pressed fighting Irish to hold on to a 14-10 victory over Michigan State.

It was the third straight win without a loss for the No. 8 ranked Irish and their fifth straight win over Michigan State, beaten for the third time in four starts this season.

Nicklaus leads

KINGS MILLS, Ohio (UPI) — Jack Nicklaus shot a two-under-par 69 Saturday for a 137 total and a three-stroke lead at the halfway point of the rain-delayed $125,000 Ohio-Kings Island open golf tournament.

Three shots off the pace at two-under-par 140s were Lee Trevino, who had a 69 Saturday; Tom Weiskopf, who had his second straight one-under-par 70; thanks to an eagle three on his final hole; and Rod Curl, who had an even-par 71.

Another shot back at 141 were J. C. Snead and John Lister while Tom Kite, John Jacobs, Tom Watson and Andy North, who had a 68 for the day, were all at even par 142.

Nicklaus, who shot a four-over-par 75 Thursday but had it washed off the board when the round was postponed by rain, tamed the 6,915-yard, par-71 Jack Nicklaus center golf course which he helped design in 36-33, with birdies on the 4th, 11th, 13th and 18th holes and bogeys on the 6th and 17th.

"I was happy the way I played," Nicklaus said. "My driving was very good and my iron game was pretty good too."

Trevino said he played "about the same" as he did in the first round when he had a one-over-par 72, except he used only 32 putts Saturday compared with 37 the day before.

Baker-led Burley blasts Bees

BURLEY — Jimmy Baker romped for 185 yards and three touchdowns in guiding the Burley Bobcats to a 28-6 decision over Bonneville and at least a share of the Eastern Idaho Conference football title Friday night.

The Bobcats roared for 376 yards on the ground and seized control at the outset, taking the opening kickoff and moving to the 31.

Burley forced Bonneville to punt seconds later and the Bobcats moved back to the Bee six before running out of downs. Ken Harper kicked a 23-yard field goal on the last play of the first quarter.

It stayed 10-0 until the third period when Burley went driving again, Baker capping this one on a 35-yard spring. Harper kicked the point after. Minutes later Burley recovered a fumble at the 3 yard line and Baker converted on that break with a one-yard drive.

Burley made it 28-0 in the fourth period when Fletcher picked up a fumble and went 35 yards to score. Bonneville took the ensuing kickoff on a 60-yard return, and then broke the shutout on a 25-yard pass from Jody Holder to Rick Howberry.

Jerome shuts out Emmett

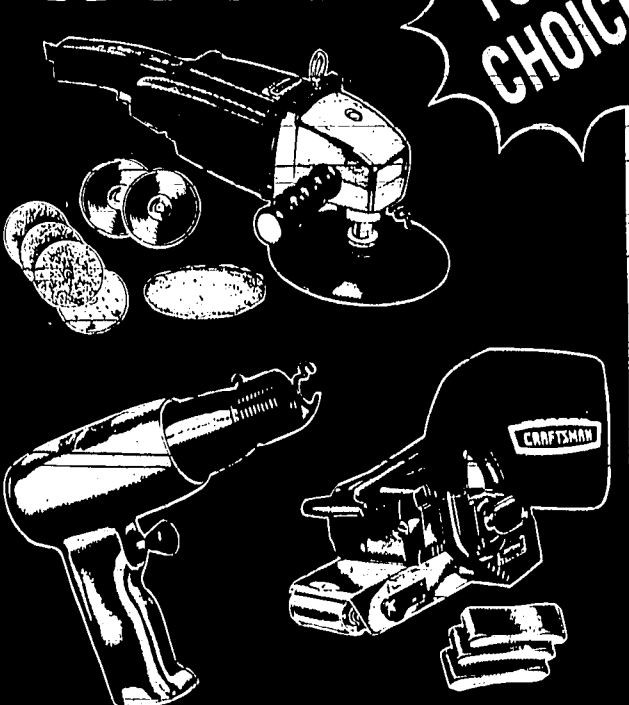

JEROME — The Jerome Tigers picked up 22 points in the first 14 minutes. Friday night and the defense blanked Emmett for a 22-0 non-conference decision.

Jerome dominated the opening minutes, getting touchdown runs of six and 16 yards from Stacy Camp and picking up another on a quarterback sneak by Randy Kelley. No other details were available.

Mountain Home tips Buhl 14-6

BUHL — The Mountain Home Tigers threw the South Central Idaho Conference football title up for grabs Friday night when they defeated the Buhl Indians 14-6 in a penalty-marred game.

A total of 280 yards in penalties were assessed, 175 against Mountain Home. But

Mushers rip Tigers for 24th win

RICHFIELD — The Camas County Mushers picked up their 24th straight victory and took a giant step toward another Snake River eight-man conference championship Friday by dropping the previously unbeaten Richfield Tigers 32-12.

With quarterback Brent Geisler having a superlative afternoon in generalship and playing, the Mushers had thingsiced by halftime. Geisler opened things with a 42-yard run, with Layne Osborne converting.

In the second period the Mushers came up with 24 points. Osborne started it rolling with a 45-yard dash and Larry Lee scored on a three-yard run. Joel Packham added six more points on a 35-yard pass interception, return. Riesler twice threw to Lee for conversions while Osborne ran another aeros.

Geisler picked up six more points with a 13-yard run, with Osborne converting, in the third period.

Richfield then broke the shutout when Mike Robinson threw a 35-yard pass to Ken Piper. The Tigers followed by recovering an onside kick and four plays later Robinson and Doug Maestas hooked up on a 48-yard scoring play.

Richfield tried another onside but Geisler scooped this one up and sailed 65 yards to score. Osborne ended things with a 20-yard scoring gallop.

Outdoor meet

The Twin Falls Fish and Wildlife Conservation Corporation will meet at 8 p.m. Tuesday in the Idaho Power service center on Blue Lakes South.

The forest service will present the program.

Valley Comment

What do you think of what is happening to Vice President Spiro Agnew?

Ron Embree, Twin Falls:
"I don't think he's innocent. I don't think anyone could be that close to it and be innocent. I think they should both be out."

Nonn Baldwin, Hazelton:
"I guess he should just stick with it and don't let anything bug him."

Roy Miller, Twin Falls:
"Well, he's evidently made a mistake and is trying to cover it up. For the good of the party I think he should resign."

Kay Empey, Twin Falls:
"I think he's kind of sitting where the rest of the party is. If he's innocent he should fight to prove it."

Patty Vinyard, Eden:
"I guess he's doing pretty well the way he's going. He isn't guilty and I don't see any reason they should chase him out."

Bruno Barbardi, Buhl:
"I really don't know. I think the man should be given a chance to prove his innocence. I think he's being given a chance."

Sinatra for chaplain?

By LESTER KINSOLVING
WASHINGTON - On Sept. 12, the New York Daily News reported my press briefing, as to what happened to those White House Sunday religious services. In my capacity as a newly accredited White House correspondent I had greatly looked forward to reviewing one of these services.

I was more than surprised, therefore, to discover that the last one was on April 15, and, as of this writing, none had been scheduled. The replies to my question only confirmed my fears.

Deputy Press Secretary Gerald Warren answered, somewhat taken aback, that these services are scheduled according to "no regular pattern," and added that Nixon "will continue to have them." The Daily News went on to report regarding President Nixon's Press Secretary Ron Zeigler that:

"Zeigler made the same point in his chat with reporters, adding that a worship service might be scheduled shortly

"just to keep Kinsolving off balance."

As a reporter and syndicated columnist, I have received a few kudos along with assorted fusillades of negative fan mail.

But what can one say when the Presidential Press Secretary announces to one's colleagues of the Fourth Estate that the possible purpose of a potential White House service could be:

"Just to keep Kinsolving off balance."

In gratitude for such an unusual distinction, this column is happy to provide suggestions for Mr. Zeigler's KKOB (Keep Kinsolving Off Balance) Campaign.

Mr. Zeigler ought to contemplate the fact that while the House and the Senate both have official chaplains, the White House has none.

For the post of White House Chaplain, this column would like to nominate not a fellow clergy man, but rather that leading layman and close friend of both the President and vice president, Frank Sinatra.

Mr. Sinatra, it should be remembered, was once seriously considered by one Hollywood producer to play the role of St. Paul. (I remember this fact well, for I can recall suggesting in my parish bulletin that this same producer should consider giving the role of the Virgin Mary to Zsa Zsa Gabor.)

It is true, admittedly, that some of Mr. Sinatra's public pronouncements have been somewhat salty. But since the most celebrated of these are directed towards a lady writer for The Washington Post, the Nixon Administration should have no grounds to disqualify his appointment.

Moreover, there are some who regard Mr. Sinatra as attractively earthy, and besides he could double as both preacher and soloist.

Chaplain Sinatra might even surpass the beneficence of frequent White House preacher Norman Vincent Peale, who said recently:

"There's nothing wrong with the political leaders of this country. They are doing a good job."

Another eye

HOLLYWOOD REPORTER: Gene Hackman, another Oscar-winner, has been signed to star in "The Dark Tower," a contemporary private eye adventure drama for Warner Bros.

A thought for the day: Union Gen. William Tecumseh Sherman said, "War is cruel and you cannot refine it."

Rosewood Junction

Ex-shepherd on way up as an entertainer

By BOB JOHNSON
Times-News Writer

SALMON — Louis Michel Irigaray is on his way up as an entertainer.

Ever since he gave up herding sheep in California nearly two years ago, the 34-year-old Basque has collected a growing number of fans who hear his ballads.

He got a push toward fame when he appeared a year-and-a-half ago on Garry Moore's "Tell the Truth" television show on CBS in New York City.

"I received more than 400 letters talking about the Basque," he said.

people and about my "Basque Balladeer" album," he said in Salmon.

Irigaray is appearing here with a backup musical comedy trio called "Rosewood Junction." The group, originally from Dallas, Tex., consists of Jim Underwood, Bobby Forman and Sam Castor.

Irigaray says he's had too much encouragement to go back to herding sheep.

He said his father told him there would always be sheep so try something different.

His first job was at the Ormsby House in Carson City, Nev. The governor of Nevada, Paul Laxalt, had heard him at the Basque Festival in Boise and he invited him to join in the opening of Laxalt's new gambling casino-hotel.

He spent seven months there before he decided to move on and get more exposure.

He's appeared in night clubs, at fairs and rodeos in California, Nevada, Utah and Idaho.

After his Salmon engagement he plans to visit Mexico and has an appearance later on the Johnny Carson television show.

CBS reports on infant autism

HOLLYWOOD — "He smiled and everything until he was about a year old. And then he just seemed to be in his own little world," says Mrs. Marcella Egan, the mother of "A Boy Named Terry Egan," a CBS Reports to be broadcast on the CBS Television Network Thursday, Oct. 11.

Marcella Egan and her husband, Michael, a butcher in Chicago, have 10 children. Terry is the ninth. He suffers from a disorder about which relatively little is known: Infantile Autism. At least 80,000 other American children are afflicted with this disorder.

"My wife and I have gone through every possible avenue to try to figure out what went wrong where. Pre-pregnancy, during her pregnancy, after the child was born, and right up until the time when we looked at each other and said, 'What are we going to do about Terry?'" says Michael Egan.

CBS news correspondent Daniel Schorr, the reporter on the broadcast says, "There is no known cause of autism. But there are defined symptoms."

Eminent Chicago psychiatrist Bruno Bettelheim, interviewed on the broadcast, says the symptoms of autism can be identified by the 18th month.

"A disinterest in the world" is characteristic of them, Bettelheim maintains. That disinterest may manifest itself first in placidity. Bettelheim says, "If an infant doesn't dry... it's a bad sign, because it shows they are already somewhat insensitive to their environment."

Terry's uncle, Rev. Erard Egan, a psychologist, was the first in Terry's family to conclude that the child had "behavioral problems." Rev. Egan describes those problems: "He was slow in language, and he was slow in making contact with others. He was slow in responding to others and more than slow, really, kind of taking pains to stay away from others."

Some key fields report shortage of personnel

By LEONARD SLOANE
(c) N.Y. Times News Service
NEW YORK — In an economy marked by shortages, not the least these days is a shortage of personnel.

Unemployment still hangs heavy over many occupations and industries. The national unemployment level in August was 4.8 per cent.

Nevertheless, there are many key fields in which the demand for skilled, qualified and experienced personnel exceeds the supply. The three broad categories of posts that employers and employment agencies find most difficult to fill these days are:

— Clerical jobs, particularly trained secretaries and executive secretaries.

— Professional positions in industry, especially engineers trained in the new technologies, lawyers and accountants.

— "Gray-collar" posts that fall between the white-collar and blue-collar levels in the hospital, building staff and transportation field.

Since business, both big and small, learned during the last recession to operate with leaner staffs, these shortages apparently are not affecting corporate profitability to any significant degree. Nevertheless, companies are searching with increased vigor these days for the right man or woman to fill the vacant job.

"The demand for skilled occupations is greater today and the supply is certainly smaller than it was a year ago," said Edward M. Cane, metropolitan director of the Manpower Services Division of the New York State Department of Labor.

This view was seconded by the latest help-wanted advertising index prepared by the conference board. The index, which measures the volume of classified advertising in 52 major newspapers in the United States, jumped 27 points over the year-ago period to 131. 1967 equals 100 on the scale.

In New York City — which has increasingly become a white-collar town for executives and other support staffs — the major problem is in the secretarial sector.

"There must be 30,000 jobs open in the clerical and secretarial areas in the city of New York," said Robert A. Marcus, president of the Association of Personnel Agencies of New York. "This past year had seen a greater influx of good job openings, with no appreciable increase in the quality of the applicants competing for these jobs."

Marcus, who is also president of the Sloan Personnel Agency, added: "The worst level is between $155 and $190 (a week) for both secretarial and clerical positions. We have in our own agency in excess of 300 active, open jobs, which is at least 15 per cent more than a year ago."

Richard Pollard, senior vice president and director of personnel at the Chase Manhattan Bank, said that a major reason for the tight supply of secretaries was that "some of the choicest high school graduates are in the suburban areas and they're filling the job pools there."

On the professional level, much of the talk about shortages revolves around engineers. But just like the stock market these days, engineering is a "two-tier" market, with new graduates in great demand, while engineers in their forties and fifties the "slide-rule engineers" with experience in such fields as defense and aero-space — are finding that it takes longer and longer to get placed.

"The older engineer who loses his job is in a position where it is very difficult to find a job," said John D. Alden, executive secretary of the engineering manpower commission. "You can't take a 45-year-old experienced engineer and expect him to go back to where the new graduates are."

Some of the retraining programs for the older men have apparently been effective, such as one that the Grumman Aerospace Corp. has been running with the aid of federal funding. Its first group of 31 men, who were reschooled in water-quality engineering, have found jobs in that field. The second, trained as electrical power engineers, is midway through a six-month program.

Chicano children helped survive culture shock

Toddlers enjoy games at center

Day care center aids

By GEORGE WILEY
Times-News
TWIN FALLS — One of the toughest problems a Chicano child faces is the adaptation of the Anglo culture, usually encountered by the child forcibly for the first time when he starts school, to the Spanish culture in which he has been raised.

The easing of this adaptation, or culture shock, in which the Chicano child often learns to see himself as an inferior figure on an Anglo landscape, is one goal of the Day Care Center being run in Twin Falls by the Idaho Migrant Council.

The Day Care Center also performs a more immediate function by giving migrant farm workers a structured setting in which to place their children while they, the parents, work in the fields.

The Twin Falls migrant day care center is now completing its first season. Opened at the Presbyterian Church in May on a grant to the Idaho Migrant Council (IMC) from the Department of Health Education and Welfare, the center will run through this month when the potato harvest is completed.

According to Dionicio Benavides, Twin Falls, area coordinator for the IMC, the center had 40 children in attendance at the peak of the farm season. The present enrollment is 33, he said.

The children range in age from infants to 6 years. Those migrant children over 6 are enrolled in the regular school system or in special school system programs during the summer, Benavides said.

A bus rented from the Twin Falls Head Start Project picks the children up in the morning at the Labor Center on Airport Road and takes them home in the evening. There is no charge to migrant families for the transportation or for the center care.

Benavides emphasized that the center provides three "Mexican" meals a day and two between meal snacks for the youngsters. The serving of Spanish food is one measure to maintain homelike familiarity in a strange setting.

At the center the children are separated into three groups, infants in the nursery, toddlers and pre-schoolers. Activities are planned for each group — mostly games for the very young children, with classes in math and English for the older children.

A special emphasis in the teaching program, according to both Benavides and center administrator Carolyn Jasso, is the teaching of English as a "second language."

"Our first language is Spanish," Mrs. Jasso said, explaining that English is taught secondary to Spanish using Spanish as a starting point.

Children entering the Anglo public school system could, Mrs. Jasso explained, are often taught English without reference to Spanish, the child's native tongue. By teaching English as a second language, the day care center not only maintains the culture tie but makes the English comprehensible to youngsters.

The difference, Mrs. Jasso said, would be between holding up a finger and saying "one," and holding up the finger and saying "uno," then holding up the finger again and saying "one — uno — one." Mrs. Jasso said teaching at all levels in the center emphasizes the Spanish culture. "We try to teach them about their culture — what their parents are doing right now... this means more to them."

The children also make trips, to the city park, to the falls, to the farms and the fields.

The children too young for classes play make believe cooking games in the kitchen, color, draw, paint, paste.

"I like the kids very much," Mrs. Jasso said. "I can always find things to do with them."

In addition to food and teaching, the center also provides medical care for the children.

According to center nurse Elizabeth Rodriguez, the children receive medical checkups by a physician when required. Dr. E. M. Wright is a special consultant to the center, she said.

The only unique medical problem affecting the migrant children, Mrs. Rodriguez said, is dysentery. She said she thought this was due to unsanitary conditions at the Twin Falls Labor Center.

Another emphasis of the center is in working with the migrant families as a whole. To this end, adult basic education classes are held at the Labor Center. The idea is to prepare both Chicano children and Chicano adults for survival in an Anglo setting where skills are valuable, where farm labor is giving ground rapidly to mechanization — without losing the basic Spanish culture.

Overall, the staff of the center voiced pleasure with the result of the first year's efforts.

"Beautiful! It's been a great success," said Benavides.

"It's been real good with a new staff," Mrs. Jasso said.

"It's been real good working with the children... there are a lot of things we need."

She mentioned children's books in Spanish.

The only unique medical problem affecting the migrant children... is dysentery... believed due to unsanitary conditions at the Twin Falls labor center.

8 added to cast

HOLLYWOOD — Four females and four males have been added to the cast of "The Shape of Things," the first all-comedy special to be made chiefly by, with and about women for broadcast Friday, Oct. 19 on the CBS Television Network.

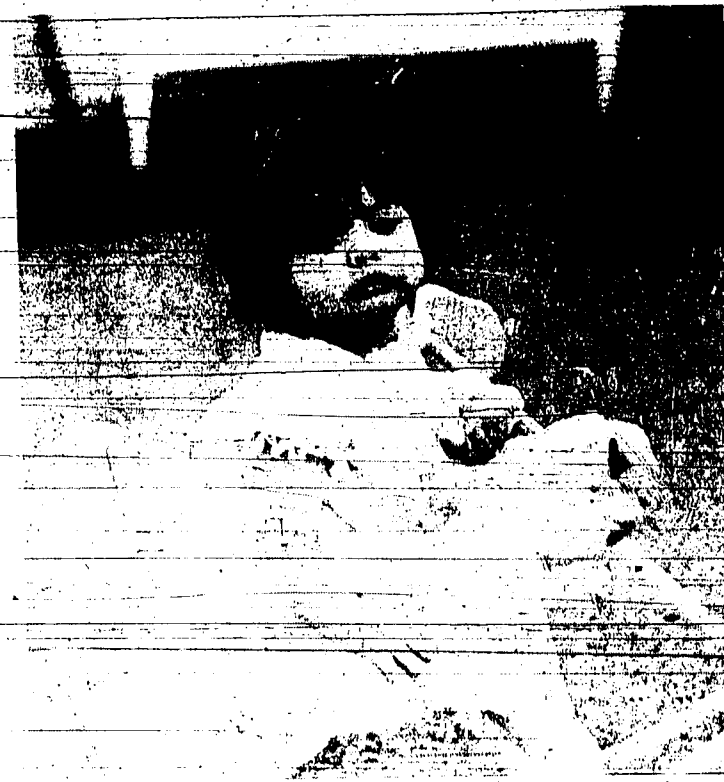

They are authoress-humorist Erma Bombeck, singer Charo, actress Pamela Grier, actor Jack Klugman, actor Rodney Allen Ripley of hamburger commercial fame, actor Richard Schaal, comedian Ronnie Schell and nightclub entertainer Liz Torres.

These guests join a previously announced cast, including Phyllis Diller, Lee Grant, Valerie Harper, Lynn Redgrave, Joan Rivers, Brenda Vaccaro and self-proclaimed male chauvinist tennis player Bobby Riggs who was defeated by female tennis star Billie Jean King in a Battle of Sexes at the Houston Astrodome on Sept. 20.

Interview said breathtaking

By RON POWERS
(c) Chicago Sun-Times

CHICAGO — Several days ago, I sat in an ABC screening room in Chicago and watched a breathtaking event unfold on a television screen.

Unfortunately, you will not witness the same event. Or to be more precise, you will see exactly what I saw, but in a protective context that probably will reduce the dramatic impact of the event to ordinariness.

I was in the screening room to preview the first segment of Dick Cavett's two 90-minute interviews with Katharine Hepburn, which will be shown on consecutive nights on ABC.

As you probably have heard by now, the interviews constitute the first time the gifted actress has appeared on a television talk show.

Further, as KJFF reported in his column a few weeks back, the conversations were impromptu in the extreme. Cavett and Miss Hepburn were strolling around the talk-show set one afternoon, simply to allow the actress to get acquainted with her surroundings, when suddenly Miss Hepburn announced: "Oh, come on, let's do it!"

Fortunately, there were cameramen and sound men on the premises. (The sound, by the way, was lousy in the version I saw, but ABC officials later assured the critics that it was the Chicago station's studio equipment, not the original-sound itself, that was at fault.)

What I saw in the screening room was exactly what followed: Miss Hepburn's impulsive command: With no fanfare, no music, no opening credits, no preliminary jokes about New York muggers or the Penn Central Railway system, the screen went up on a surprised Cavett and Miss Hepburn settling themselves in their swivel chairs.

Cavett is dressed in a blue work-shirt, white slacks and white loafers. Miss Hepburn has on tan slacks and sandals and a casual black jacket with her customary pointed collar. As we in the screening room technicians moved frantically in front of the cameras, background voices jabbered and Miss Hepburn insisted on changing seats with Cavett.

"Can we have a table?" she asks at one point, looking off camera. Then: "Nobody answers . . . I might want to put my feet on it." A moment later, she mutters, "That carpet — if anybody can survive that carpet."

We see a technician frantically trying to arrange Miss Hepburn's hair. "Don't tell me what's wrong," the famous, imperious voice commands. "Just fix it."

Things go on in that vein for several minutes, and I must admit that the whole episode had me spellbound. This is what television can do most beautifully, and what it does so seldom: catch human beings in moments of spontaneity, of impromptu meandering. The sense of intimacy, of the event, of being there, was overwhelming. It recalled a remark that somebody, possibly Marshall McLuhan, once made, to the effect that "radio is the best medium for carrying a symphony concert; television is the best medium for carrying a symphony rehearsal."

More than anything Miss Hepburn subsequently said on the interview (I recall few enduring ideas, although several flashes of elegance and wit), the sight of her preparing for the interview must rank as one of TV's better moments this fall.

I suppose we should be thankful that the ABC cameras and mikes were on during this interlude, and let it go at that. But I wish for more.

I wish the viewer could see the event as I did, cold, with no introduction whatsoever. But I understand that ABC plans to splice in the standard Cavett opening, with the band music, credits and announcer's voice-over. Then, Cavett will appear on screen and explain "what we are about to see."

Maybe that precaution will make things clearer for a few literal-minded viewers. Maybe it is being done to satisfy the FCC. I don't know. But the larger effect is to imprison a rare happening in the chains of day-to-day predictability.

Sometimes television almost soars in spite of itself. But never really, quite.

JOSE FELICIANO
... sets CSI date

Guitarist will appear Oct. 20

TWIN FALLS — Associated Students of the College of Southern Idaho will present Jose Feliciano, world famed guitarist and vocalist in a concert Oct. 20 at 8 p.m. in the CSI auditorium.

Tickets are available at the CSI book store, Garth's Music or may be ordered with a check mailed to Jose Feliciano Tickets, College of Southern Idaho, Twin Falls, 83301.

The concert is open to the general public with tickets $5 for the public and $3 for CSI students.

Raised in the New York's Spanish-Harlem, Jose Feliciano gained international prominence shortly before his 21st birthday anniversary. The song he recorded that year, 1968, "Light My Fire" gained him international status and garnered two Grammy Awards for Feliciano — the Best New Artist award and the Best Male Vocalist of the year.

With this recording he achieved the first of some 30 Gold Albums he now has to his credit.

Blind since birth, Jose learned to express his inner feelings in song and music.

"That's what a song is all about for me — I must feel it in my heart," he says.

Feliciano made his first public appearance at the age of 10 years in a Puerto Rican club in the Bronx, accompanying himself on a $10 guitar purchased by a friend. He began to imitate the sounds of the favorite stars, Sam Cooke, Ray Charles, Elvis Presley and Frankie Laine, blending them together with his own style.

Feliciano's success story from his humble beginning in the Spanish-Harlem as one of a family of 12 in a three room apartment has become the epitome of the American Dream come true. His story now provides hope and inspiration for other sightless and handicapped young persons.

His stature has grown with each performance on the concert stage and ranging from the Newport Jazz Festival to the London Palladium, the Empire Room at New York's Waldorf-Astoria to the Greek Theatre in Los Angeles.

He has appeared with Cleveland, Pittsburgh and London symphony orchestras. He has performed on the soundtrack of several motion pictures, in television specials and variety shows and his own Spanish language weekly television series shown in the United States and throughout Latin America.

He has performed Michel Legrand's Oscar winning, "Windmills of Your Mind" for the 1965 Academy Awards telecast.

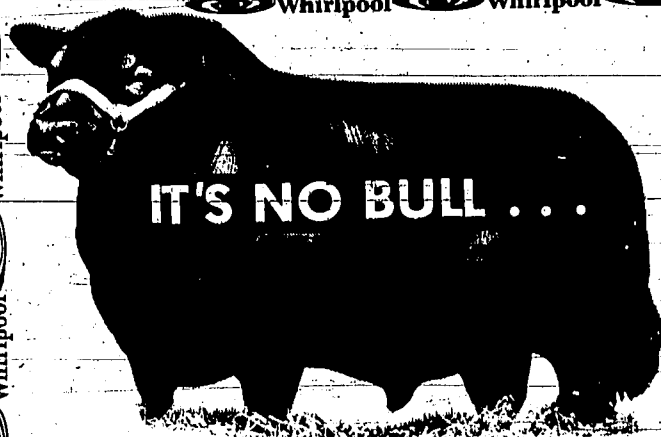

Jose and his wife, Janna, live on a rambling 10 acre ranch about an hour's drive from Hollywood. They handle the business of the far flung Feliciano Enterprises, a corporation involved in everything from real estate to music publishing and a 16-track recording studio.

Playboy magazine survey compared to Kinsey's

By KATHRYN CHRISTENSEN

(Chicago Daily News

CHICAGO — Playboy

Magazine calls it the firstmajor national survey since the Kinsey reports. But is it?

National magazines,

columnists and commentators are reporting on — and reproducing the results of the playboy sex survey. Playboy will continue to serialize those results in the next five issues of the magazine, and author

Morton Hunt will spin off a book based on those results for Playboy Press.

Nevertheless, respected professionals and critics have doubts about the credibility of the survey and the methods used in doing it.

"Hugh Hefner was always very much impressed by the Kinsey reports," said Paul

Gebhard, director of Kinsey's institute for sex research. "He wanted to see it repeated. When he asked us to do it, we told him it would take a long time and an enormous amount of money. (The Kinsey study took 15 years to complete.) Apparently he simply got impatient and decided to do it himself."

And what does Playboy's 2-year-long study purport to show? Well, that premarital and oral sex are on the increase, women are having more orgasms than in the past and that the homosexuality rate has remained stable. So says the first of six articles based on the survey.

Although no one seems to be quarreling yet with those conclusions, the experts are skeptical about the basis for them and do disagree with findings in some portions of the study.

And, hardly anyone but Playboy is associating this latest survey with the magnitude of the reports of Alfred Kinsey 25 years ago.

The reasons:

— Playboy's research was done by the Research Guild, Inc., an outfit on Chicago's Michigan Avenue, not a clinical assembly of scholars. Kinsey did his research with the help of five other scientists.

— Playboy's survey is based on questionnaires filled out by 2,025 persons in 24 cities. Kinsey—and his associates personally interviewed more than 10,000 persons.

— Playboy spent "upwards of $100,000 on its survey. The Kinsey officials say that $300,000 wouldn't have covered expenses if Playboy had really done the job.

But the biggest questions on the Playboy survey center on the sample itself: were the persons who filled out the questionnaires really representative of the country's population.

There is no way of knowing. But Playboy contends it is a representative sample, although the techniques used in gathering it simply do not follow the accepted forms for such research.

Sex polling invariably attracts the people most willing to discuss their sex lives.

CSI slates Diary of Ann Frank

TWIN FALLS—The Diary of Anne Frank, a young Jewish girl's day-to-day record of a fearful, tedious and yet also happy and hopeful two years of concealment in an attic with her family, in the hope of escaping Nazi arrest, is to be presented at the CSI Fine Arts Auditorium Oct. 25-27 at 8:15 p.m. There will be a matinee Oct. 26 at 2:15 p.m.

Of all the personal documents published about the heroism and the terrors of World War II, a teen-age girl's simple chronicle of her existence while in hiding in Holland has probably had greater impact than any other.

When the diary was first published in 1952, it seized considerable attention. But the story of the gallant girl and her family achieved worldwide fame when it was made into a play by Frances and Albert Hackett—the play that won the Pulitzer Prize and the New York Drama Critics Award in 1956.

This play not only overwhelmed American audiences by means of a 90-week run in New York, and comparably long runs in every other major key city. It had a particularly powerful effect in Europe, where the kind of experience that Anne Frank lived through was still strong in the memory of millions. The picture of the sweet adolescent girl and her family, who were known to have died subsequently (except for Ann's father) as a result of Nazi persecution, affected German audiences especially.

"German audiences," reported Life Magazine, "invariably greet the final curtain in stricken silence and have jumped the theatres in what seems almost a national act of penance." (It was presented in 18 German cities simultaneously.)

What catapulted the play into this international success was not any originality of plot, or narration of any aspect of Nazi persecution that had not been told before. (In fact no Nazis or any of their persecutions are seen in the play, the action of which is all in the cramped hideout, through the presence of Nazis offstage dramatically influences all the on-stage action.)

The shock and the success of the play stem from remarkable character of the young girl, as revealed in her diary, and the knowledge in every theatergoer that it is all true, that the play is a dramatization of a real diary of a real group of refugees.

Anne Frank was a gangly, typical 13-year-old girl when she began to keep her diary in July, 1942. This was on the day when, with some neighbors named Van Dann, she came with her father, mother and sister to hide in an attic in Nazi-occupied Amsterdam. They were going into hiding to avoid the likelihood of being seized, as other Jews were being seized, and sent to the tortures and probable death of a concentration camp.

Her record of the self-imposed seclusion, aided by a friendly Gentile family who brought them spare food rations, had little that was grim about it, though she and her family, and the others sharing the seclusion all lived under the shadow of imminent death.

Instead, it was filled with the young girl's gossip, tales of the fights, intimacies, jealousies, humorous incidents and noble impulses among her family and the four other Jews who shared the attic with them; filled with the story of her burgeoning love for the young son of the other family; filled with the exuberance of sensitive, glowing teen-ager on tip-toe before life, eager for experience, living each moment to the fullest, almost forgetting those who sought her life.

"In spite of everything," she kept writing in the diary, "I believe that people are really good at heart."

More than two years passed before Anne Frank's diary came to an end. She had become 15. Hope was in the air. From the British radio that they tuned in softly during the night, the fugitives knew that the Russians were marching steadily toward Berlin, that the American armies had broken into the heart of France. Anne wrote in her diary that she expected to be back in school by fall. But after her entry of Aug. 1, 1944, nothing more was written in the diary.

The play tells why. In its next-to-last scene what the attic-inmates had been fearing for two years, happens. The Gestapo, tipped off by a thief, surround and besiege the hideaway. The curtain falls on the ominous sounds of a door being battered down, off-stage.

The subsequent fate of those eight persons trapped by their enemies at the day's end, was tragic. Seven died, within months of their capture. Only Anne's father, Otto Frank, survived. On his broken-hearted return, after the end of the war, to the scene of the two-year-long seclusion, he discovered Ann's diary, which had been scattered on the floor with other papers and notebooks of hers as the Nazis took her away.

"When they came," he has said, "no one wept. Anne was very quiet and composed, only just as dispirited as the rest of us."

What happened to this sweetly innocent and sensitive teen-ager after that has been movingly told in "Anne Frank: A Portrait of Courage," a book by Ernst Schtibel, published in 1958 and written after interviews with 42 people who survived the ordeal that killed her. From their memories he has reconstructed the tale of the indomitable Anne's last months.

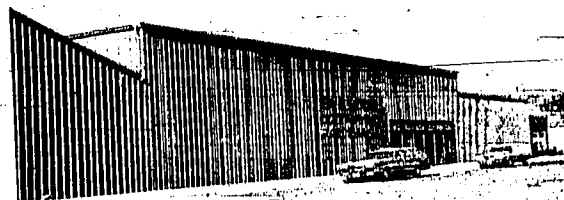

She seems to have been happy in the first camp, at Westerbork, where she could still see her sweetheart, Peter. But as allied armies moved closer, the Germans herded the captive Jews into trains for the dreaded Auschwitz in Poland, where 4,000,000 Jews died. There, under increasingly difficult hardships she continued alert and sweet and helped cheer up others on the verge of breaking down.

After a time, Anne and her sister Margot were allowed to leave Auschwitz for a work-camp at Bergen-Belsen.

Gardeners urged to save ashes

By GEORGE ABRAHAM

SAVE THE WOOD ASHES: With the fuel shortage upon us, many home owners are going to use the fireplace more this winter to heat the house. Be sure and save your wood ashes and keep them dry.

Unleached ashes contain all the mineral elements that were in the original wood. The most abundant elements are lime and potash.

At one time wood ashes were the chief source of potash, which is the plant food that gives stiff stems and imparts increased vigor and disease resistance to plants.

Besides potash, wood contains about 2 per cent phosphorus, the plant food that stimulates growth and root formation.

Don't use wood ashes with manure, unless it is well rotted. Ashes can be used on the compost pile with leaves to hasten decomposition. Since wood ashes contain lime don't use them on soils for potatoes — and keep them away from "acid-loving" plants such as azaleas and rhododendrons.

Generally speaking, scattering ashes on the garden is a good way to get rid of the ashes. Don't add them year after year, unless you test the soil to make sure it's not overly sweet, or so saturated with ashes as to cause drying out of the soil.

Many use ashes to discourage insects. One reader writes: "I spread wood ashes from my fireplace over the garden and around the dog yard fence (outside where I plant cucumbers to climb up the wire fence. I even dusted some on the leaves and we've never had a bit of squash bug."

She adds: "Didn't the earlier settlers burn off clearings and immediately plant corn?"

WHY—NO SQUASH? Although the gardening season has come to a close, you might be interested to know why squash, gourds or pumpkins sometimes do not form fruit.

Here's what a reader did to correct this situation: "Each morning I go out with a small artist's brush and brush each flower, spreading the pollen to nearby flowers, always coming back to the first flower. Some years bees and bugs do not transfer pollen from the blossoms so my trick helps."

VEGETABLES WITHOUT GARDENS: Did you know you can grow many vegetables without having a garden? We've mentioned several ways of doing this — growing them in containers, etc. We're enjoying a wonderful squash which you can grow by your kitchen window. It's called Gold Nugget.

This squash does not grow on vines, but on bushes which are compact, not sprawling. They take up little space. Fruit Golden Nugget is orange, small and flattened.

They look like pumpkins but are definitely a squash. Being the size of a softball, Gold Nugget is just right for serving in the shell. They are ideal for the person living alone, or a couple who don't want to cut up a large winter squash and have some left over.

Another bonus: Gold Nugget keeps well in storage. It bears early, yielding 5 to 8 fruit per vine. We cook the entire squash in a pressure cooker, cool it and scrape out the seeds. Seeds come out beautifully.

Put this vegetable down on the calendar for 1974. You can grow it in a corner, in a pot, in a tub or even in your greenhouse.

Green Thumb note: I'm making a collection of vegetables which can be grown in tubs, pots, baskets or on trellises so folks who don't have a garden can grow them.

Will readers please send me your ideas for growing vegetables in a small space? We'll put them in a bulletin and offer it free of charge, so please send me your suggestions.

SAVE CORN TASSELS: If you are making up fall flower arrangements don't forget you can use corn tassels in among flowers and fruits. Corn tassels dry well and can be gathered any time.

Florists use corn tassels in fall and autumn arrangements, along with vegetables and fruits, flowers, berries, branches, nuts, cones, leaves and pods.

Use your imagination and gather seed pods, wild "grains," leaves, etc. for your table arrangements. Dwarf ornamental corn is ideal, and you can even use the husks, leaves as well as the tassels.

Work these items in with flowers, gourds, apples, and whatever is available.

FREEZING VEGETABLES: Here's your last chance to freeze your vegetables: To flash freeze tomatoes: Wash fruit and dry, put on a cookie sheet in the freezer. Do not let them touch each other.

When frozen put in a plastic bag. They do not keep their firmness, but are good for soups, stews, etc. Flavor and juice are there, and it's less work than canning.

To freeze onions: Make sure they have no bad spots. Freeze on a cookie sheet, age in a plastic container. Do not wash or peel. Use just as they come from the garden.

Freeze garlic: Same way as you do onions. To freeze string beans: Wash, cut ends, put in plastic bag. Cover with water and freeze. Thanks to our readers who sent us these tips.

PEACH TREE FROM SEED: Will a peach tree from a seed or "pit" produce worthwhile fruit? We've had a tree that produced fairly decent fruit, and we've had some which produced hard, sour fruit.

It's hard to say what you'll get. Your best bet is to buy a budded tree from your nursery and you'll know that your tree will produce edible fruit.

QUESTION BOX
QUESTION OF THE WEEK: F.R. of Filer: "A florist told us that the best cut flowers we could grow in our small hobby greenhouse is the snapdragon. Can we sow seed from the regular garden snapdragon and grow plants in the greenhouse?"

Many greenhouse operators feel that the snapdragon is the biggest money-maker and for home-greenhouse use, we don't feel there is a better subject for cut flower production.

A word of caution: There are outdoor garden snapdragons and there are greenhouse snapdragons. If you want snaps to blossom in the greenhouse, use varieties bred for indoor culture.

Garden type snaps will make a lot of growth in the greenhouse but produce few or no flowers. For that reason garden snaps can be a real disappointment to anyone who wants to grow snaps under glass.

Many commercial seedhouses classify greenhouse snapdragons according to "response groups," based on their reaction to day length, light intensity and to temperature.

We suggest you talk to your local greenhouse operator and see if he won't sell you some snapdragon seedlings. It's difficult for the home greenhouse operator to buy from a commercial seedsmen in small amounts.

If you locate some snapdragon seed keep in mind that it is very tiny and should be sown lightly on top of a loose, well-drained mixture of one part each of sand, peat and loam.

Or use some starting mediums found in garden centers. Germinate the seeds in a dark place at 72 degrees or so.

As soon as they show above soil, move them to bright light. After seedling are about three-quarters to an inch high, transplant them into pots.

A fair rule of thumb: Snaps to blossom from late fall through midwinter should be sown about 10th of July. Those to flower in spring should be started from October to January or February. Set plants 7 inches apart in your greenhouse bench.

C.D. of Shoshone: "Please tell us how to grow a wax or parlor plant. Ours never blossoms."

This oldtime favorite needs full sun and good drainage for bud formation. Give yours plenty of moisture in summer, spring and fall, but in winter keep it on the dry side.

Best temperature in winter is around 50 to 55 degrees at night and 60 to 65 degrees in daytime. Plants are naturally slow to flower and take 3 or 4 years before they'll blossom.

If yours won't bloom, even in full sun, allow the plant to become potbound. This often forces it into blooms. Too large a pot will discourage blooming. Start new plants by tip cuttings rooted in moist sand.

Nevada cave proves link in man's history

MODERMITT, Nev. (UPI)

Archaeologists were delighted this summer when they uncovered a cave which had been one final refuge for the Indians as they retreated before the massive advance of the White Man early this century.

But what they didn't know at the time they started their excavation was that the same cave had been used by prehistoric man some 10,000 years before.

Their discovery turned out to be another significant link in the long chain of man's history in the West's great basin.

The original discovery of the cave as a hideaway for the Indians had been regarded as rich enough in artifacts for the Nevada state museum to receive a grant of $17,337 from the Max C. Fleischmann Foundation.

A team of seven excavators set up camp near the cave under the direction of Dr. Thomas Layton, an archaeologist who has worked 14 Times-News, Twin Falls, Idaho Supply, October 7, 1973 or directed digs on a score of similar sites in the Great Basin over the past 10 years.

The site appropriately named the "Last Supper Cave," and the dig was fruitful from its start. Tests proved the bones on the surface had been left there in the early part of the century. The skulls of livestock had been broken open to extract the brains, a known Indian technique.

The excavation turned up wooden pegs, some with bloodstains still on them, which had been used to stake the hides to the floor of the cave for drying. A piece of glass from a bottle made by a Kansas City Co. which went out of business in 1917 was found.

These finds jibed with history. Early in the 1900's the white man's assaults across northern Nevada had finally begun to deprive the Indians of their land and food sources. In desperation, the Indians rustled cattle and horses to feed their starving families, retreating to caves such as this one high in a secluded canyon in Humboldt county in northern Nevada. The site is still kept secret from the public to prevent vandalism.

In their routine excavations for more recent artifacts, the archaeologists found that all strata in the cave were not equal: below the surface Layton's crew uncovered a stratum containing freshwater mussel shells.

"This stratum was quite thick," explained Layton, "showing that the cave had been much more heavily used by man in prehistoric times than even during the Indians' last stand there."

Radio carbon dates demonstrate that Indians who occupied the cave about 10,000 years ago harvested river mussels from a nearby creek, he said. Stone scrapers and projectile points recovered are of types that until now have been found only on the ancient beach terraces of now-vanished Great Basin Lakes.

The abundance of river mussel shells from the bottom of the cave suggests a much wetter climate 10,000 years ago, Layton said.

One of the most important things about the last supper cave is it is basically dry.

Most of the caves have moisture," Layton said, "which rots cordage and basketry, and badly damages other materials. In this case, we have been able to find netting, arrow shafts and feathers, and even human feces which can be dated."

Layton says, "this is the first time we have excavated a dry cave in an upland area. That will give us an upland subsistence pattern of early man to complement our findings on lakeshore subsistence patterns. That will mean a tremendous stride toward completing the picture of man's early development in the Great Basin."

WEITMAN'S NEXT HOLLYWOOD A UPI Robert Weitman's next production for Columbia Pictures will be "The First Deadly Sin," a suspense drama based on Lawrence Sanders' novel.

Digest tells TF family escape

TWIN FALLS — You stand neck deep in freezing water. The winter wind howls into your wet face, blowing the water to ice.

In front of you your family car lies overturned in the creek, only its wheels and chassis exposed. Inside the upside down car are your husband and your children!

Dimly, through your shock, the chatter of your teeth, the darkness, you are aware of your children's screams. Ice water is rushing into the car through the partly open window through which you have just pulled yourself.

Desperately, you dive back into the water, groping for the open window, hoping against hope that you can pull your family out — but all your hand feels through the numbness is the slickness of solid glass. How can the window be closed?

Such was the terrifying experience last winter of Phyllis Roberts, Twin Falls. The story of how she, her husband Ben and her four children escaped from the car and were rescued from freezing to death along an isolated stretch of U.S. Highway 93 south of Jackpot has been recounted in the current issue of the Reader's Digest.

The Roberts' family story first appeared in the Ruralite, a monthly electrical co-op magazine, under the byline of Arvetta Savage, now a writer for the South Idaho Press.

Editors of the Ruralite sent a copy of the story to the Reader's Digest and asked them if they would like to publish it. Instead, the national magazine dispatched writer Joseph P. Blank to interview the Roberts family and write his own story of the incident.

Reluctantly, after discussions between attorneys, according to Mrs. Savage, the Reader's Digest agreed to pay a finder's fee for the original Ruralite story.

Ben Roberts this week declined to talk to the Times-News about the family's experience. "The phone's been ringing steadily since it (the Reader's Digest article) came out," he said. He said neither he nor his family wanted further publicity from the incident which was "a long time ago."

According to the Reader's Digest account the Roberts were returning from a vacation in San Diego last November, when their car, with Phyllis Roberts at the wheel, hit a patch of black ice on a bridge over a creek south of Jackpot and skidded off the road and overturned in the water.

The Reader's Digest titled its story, which appeared in the Drama in Real Life section, "Terror at Shoshone Creek."

According to the story, once Phyllis Roberts freed herself from the car she tried to find the open window through which she had crawled but could not because the current of the creek had carried her a few feet downstream and she was groping at the car's back window.

Thinking her husband and children dead, or at least drowning, she crawled out of the creek and up an embankment, hoping to signal for help on the highway. But, she discovered, she had crawled up the wrong bank of the stream, and seeking to cross over again in the dark, she twisted her ankle. She lay on the wrong bank, shivering and freezing; she saw, according to the Reader's Digest story, "incongruously, that the car's flasher signals were still blinking under the black water."

Meanwhile, Ben Roberts had been momentarily knocked out by the impact of the crash. When he came to he thought he was drowning but heard his children screaming.

"His children needed help and he had to do something," Blank wrote in the Reader's Digest. "Holding Sally under one arm, he scrambled to the back seat. He felt small bodies. Suddenly his mouth was out of water. He coughed and inhaled air. Hands grabbed at his face and pulled at his hair. It was pitch-black."

Roberts organized his children, got their heads above water, then, according to the Reader's Digest account, he began to grope around in the water for his wife, not knowing that she had escaped from the car.

Under the water, Roberts felt what he thought was his wife's body, but it was actually an oversize pillow. Thinking his wife dead, Roberts crawled into the back seat of the car, intent upon saving his children. He pulled the lock on the back door and pushed it open.

When he had pulled himself out of the water through the open door, Roberts saw Phyllis lying on the bank. He spoke to her, saw that she had twisted her ankle and could not stand. He went back into the water, pulled the children out one at a time and handed them to his wife on the bank.

"Phyllis gathered the children behind a clump of sagebrush," wrote Blank. "They were crying in pain from the terrible cold and their clothing was growing stiff. Phyllis knew it would take only a short time before frostbite attacked their hands and feet."

Leaving the children with his wife, Roberts then waded back across the creek and crawled up the bank to the highway to signal for help. No cars were in sight.

Roberts was trying to decide whether to try to jog to Jackpot, and wondering if he could make it, according to the Reader's Digest account, when he saw the headlights of a car far down the road.

He stood in the middle of the road and waved his arms but the car went on by. In tears, Roberts watched the taillights in the night as the car went up the highway.

But the car turned and came back. It was a station wagon driven by Leonard Braden, a Pocatello schoolteacher who, with his wife, was also returning from a visit in California.

Braden told the Reader's Digest he had not stopped originally because he had felt the black ice and was afraid the car would skid. He described Roberts as, in Blank's words, "a strange figure, clothes gleaming and hair hanging like icicles around his head."

With the Bradens' help Roberts got his wife and children into the station wagon and covered them with blankets and sleeping bags. Braden drove them to Jackpot where casino customers and employees got the family into motel rooms, turned the heat up and ran hot baths for the children.

Later, the Roberts were taken to Twin Falls by ambulance and examined by the family doctor.

The only injury, according to the Reader's Digest account, was the sprain to Phyllis Roberts' ankle.
